An estimated 2,000 persons turned out Sunday for dedication ceremonies and open house of the new Municipal Building. Following the presentation of American and state flags, a series of speeches and other formal activities, the visitors to the building jammed the corridors, looking into city offices and taking guided tours of the police department. In the above photo, a large crowd gathers on the outside to hear dedication statements by Rep. William Randall while in the photo at left, Dave Goldsmith, 718 East 24th, gives a boost to his son, Kevin, 6, while the youngster gazes through a piece of surveying equipment that had been put on display in the city engineering office.

New Municipal Building dedicated in ceremony

Sunday afternoon approximately 200 Sedalians witnessed a ceremony that hadn't been performed at the corner of Second and Osage for nearly a 100 years — the dedication of a new seat of city government.

In November, 1874, the cornerstone was laid for a combined "city hall and market place." Under the clear November sky Sunday, the $750,000 Municipal Building was officially bequeathed to the city as a structure "typifying the 'can-do' spirit of the community."

Members of American Legion Post 16 hoisted the Missouri State flag and American flag, the latter having flown over the

Nearly 2,000 tour facility

"The aqua-blue mattresses on the jail beds were the thing that stood out in my mind most," said Mrs. H. O. Berry, 601 West Third, after taking a top-to-bottom tour of the new Municipal Building Sunday.

Whether it was the color of the cell bunk mattresses, the quality of local art and handicraft, or just "the beauty of it all," approximately 2,000 people toured the new Municipal Building and, from all indications, liked what they saw.

Frank B. Van Dyke, Route 1, said he had been in the old building "hundreds and hundreds of times," and was quick to point out his preference for the new one.

"I think it represents such a good job of building," Van Dyke said. "I'm sure glad that the city workers now will have this place to work in. People can always do better jobs in newer and better offices, I think."

One woman, identifying herself only as Mrs. Neville, wasn't long in picking out her favorite spot in the new building — the O.A.T.S. (Older Adults Transportation Service) office on the second floor.

"It's sure an improvement over what we used to have," she said. "I'm glad we've got O.A.T.S. and I'm just as glad we've got these new offices here to use."

The weatherman received his fair share of compliments from Mrs. Charles Hamby, 1002 West 11th, for providing what she described as "a really beautiful day for the event... it couldn't have been nicer."

Harvey Bohling, 1908 Fairview Court, a Sedalia homebuilder for the past 25 years, was particularly impressed with the quality of lumber used throughout the building.

"I don't see how they got all this good material," he said. "... the wood has such a nice finish."

Leroy Wimer, 2015 East 10th, appreciated the functional arrangement of the city collector and city clerk's offices on the ground floor near the main entrance.

"I like the idea of not having to walk up steps and having plenty of room to wait in line," Wimer said.

Attracting considerable attention were the collection of local

United States Capitol. The Smith-Cotton High School band played the National Anthem.

Setting the tone for the afternoon's activities, Chamber of Commerce President Jake Siragusa welcomed the audience, saying "Generations in the future will thank you for your farsightedness." The Municipal Building, Siragusa said, "symbolizes a new era... of progressive thinking. This is your time to boast."

In his keynote address, Rep. William J. Randall described Sedalia as a place where "the American dream is still alive and well and prospering," and attacked what he termed "the federal government's preferential treatment for large urban areas."

"I will never in the future vote for any proposed allocation to large cities unless there are also provisions for allocations to cities the size of Sedalia," Randall told the crowd, which applauded his pledge.

Randall cited the energy crisis and the migration from rural areas to metropolitan centers as major "short-term" and "long-term" national problems, respectively.

"The most important immediate problem," he said, "is the energy crisis. This is true because we are a nation geared to wheels."

The "transcending" problem of rural migration to urban areas, Randall said, must be solved for the benefit of both sectors of the country. "If it isn't," he predicted, "one area will be stripped of opportunity while the others will become unmanageable."

Randall dismissed as "hogwash" the notion that "cities such as New York... and San Francisco are the dominant locations on our national landscape." Instead, he suggested, "it's cities like Sedalia who hold the real promise for America."

Describing one final aspect of the rural migration situation, Randall warned his listeners against succumbing to "a new fear... that your small-town way of life may be destroyed by a reverse migration" of urban dwellers to rural areas.

"It will take a nice balancing act to decide what is enough and what's too much," he acknowledged. "All change is not progress and all progress does not necessarily demand drastic change."

Following Randall's remarks, Mayor Jerry Jones recognized all members of the City Council and paid special tribute to building architect Don Buller and contractor Richard Dean.

Also cited were Mrs. David Malmo, Mrs. Cline Cain and Mrs. James McNeil, who led a drive to successfully raise enough funds to purchase the two large urns which graced the Municipal Building's front lawn. The urns originally belonged to Col. A. D. Jaynes, one of Sedalia's earliest prominent residents.

In his remarks to the crowd, Jones expressed his gratitude to the citizens for their "untiring efforts and salient advice." The progress of the last few years, Jones told them, "would not have been possible without your cooperation."

Noting the closeness of the dedication date with Thanksgiving Day, Jones remarked that "all we have is a gift of God in response to creative and industrious labor. This attainment is a reflection of the people of Sedalia whose possessions are among the greatest of human assets... initiative, courage, a willingness to work and a boundless faith in God."

The dedication ceremony was flawed by an inadequate public address system, which prevented most of those attending from

Desegregation case to high court again

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court agreed today to consider for a second time whether federal courts may reach into the suburbs to desegregate predominantly black inner-city schools.

The court also agreed to decide whether whites are unconstitutionally discriminated against by a University of Washington law school policy that gives preference to minority members. But the court declined to hear arguments by policewomen in Nassau County, N.Y., who claim they are denied an equal chance at promotions.

The Supreme Court agreed to review a federal appeals court ruling that the only constitutional way to desegregate Detroit city schools was to include predominantly white suburban school systems in any desegregation plan.

The issue of crossing established school district and county lines in pursuit of school desegregation deadlocked the court 4-4 last term. No precedent is established by tie votes.

Michigan officials and 43 of the suburban Detroit school systems challenged the June ruling by the full U.S. Circuit Court in Cincinnati. The justices agreed to hear their appeals in a routine order.

The law school admissions case has aroused widespread interest because of its potential effect on "affirmative action" admissions policies designed to increase the percentage of minority students.

The appeal was brought by Marco De. Funis Jr. of Seattle, who brought suit after he was rejected twice for admission to University of Washington law school.

De Funis charged, and school administrators acknowledged, that the school policy permitted admittance of minority students with lower grades and other qualifications.

The Nassau County policewomen argued that the police department and county civil service commission discriminate against women by maintaining a two-track promotion system segregated by sex.

In other action today, the court: —Suspended convicted Watergate conspirator G. Gordon Liddy from practicing law before the Supreme Court.

As is usual in such cases, the court ordered Liddy to show cause within 40 days why he should not be permanently prohibited from practicing law before the high court.

—Struck down an Illinois law requiring voters who wanted to change party affiliations to make the switch 23 months before a primary election.

—Ruled that U.S. employers may refuse to hire resident aliens without violating a civil rights law clause prohibiting discrimination on the basis of national origin.

—Declined to hear challenges to a Maine law holding oil companies liable for offshore spills from ships heading for terminals in the state's Portland Harbor.

—Rejected Missouri's search for a loophole in the high court's decision granting women the right to abortions during the first six months of pregnancy.

The circuit court, while approving a multidistrict approach for Detroit desegregation, sent the case back to the district court for formulation of a specific plan.

The circuit court ruled 6 to 3 that the Detroit school board and the state of Michigan had acted to keep the races separate, and found no alternative to multidistrict desegregation.

Saxbe nomination held up by salary

WASHINGTON (AP) — Two law school professors differed at a Senate Judiciary Committee hearing today on whether Sen. William B. Saxbe, R-Ohio, can be made eligible for appointment as attorney general.

The issue, which is holding up President Nixon's nomination of Saxbe, is whether legislation to roll back the attorney general's salary would overcome a constitutional disqualification of the senator.

Prof. Philip Kurland of the University of Chicago Law School testified he didn't see how any such measure could be looked on "except as an evasion of the Constitution."

The lead-off witness, Kurland said the Constitution is explicit in prohibiting the appointment of a member of Congress, during the term of which he is elected, to an office for which the salary was increased during that time.

In 1969, with Saxbe a member of the Senate, Congress raised the salary of the attorney general and other Cabinet members from $35,000 a year to $60,000.

But William Van Alstyne, associate dean of the Duke University Law School, argued that passage of proposed legislation to roll back the attorney general's salary to $35,000 would make Saxbe eligible for appointment.

He said the purpose of the constitutional provision would have been met because the measure would prevent a member of Congress from benefiting from a salary boost passed while he was a member.

Kurland and Van Alstyne were among the witnesses called by the committee in an effort to determine whether the pay cut measure would clear away the constitutional barrier to Saxbe's nomination.

Two Judiciary Committee members, Sens. Sam J. Ervin Jr., D-N.C., and Robert C. Byrd, D-W. Va., contend that Saxbe's appointment as Attorney General would be unconstitutional until after the expiration of the 6-year Senate term to which he was elected in 1968.

Construction workers being held in Athens

ATHENS (AP) — Police and soldiers rounded up a number of construction workers and youths today and took them to a temporary detention camp set up in one of Athens' soccer stadiums.

Some construction workers took part in last week's student-led antigovernment demonstrations, and many stayed off their jobs today. A number of large construction sites in the city were operating with scores of workers missing.

Security police also were arresting leaders of construction unions, reportedly blaming them for their workers staying off the job.

Tanks and soldiers in full battle gear patrolled the main squares of Athens and a military helicopter circled overhead on the lookout for new antigovernment demonstrations.

Students heading for the university were stopped for identity checks. About 100 of them were taken to detention centers for questioning.

At a hastily called morning news conference, government spokesman Spyridon Zournatzis said that 866 workers and students, 150 of them women, were arrested during the street fighting Friday night. He said 662 have been released.

The government disclosed that nine were killed Friday night and four Saturday. The Athens medical examiner said six of the victims were bystanders, including a 22-year-old Norwegian woman and a 5-year-old Greek boy.

Some stores were closed today and many construction workers were absent from their jobs, but the morning rush hour traffic was jammed as usual.

Curious office workers stopped briefly to gaze at the tanks stationed at central squares. Troops stood guard alongside police officers at main thoroughfares.

On Sunday, Zournatzis reiterated the position of Premier Spyros Markezinis, who has pledged free parliamentary elections in 1974.

"Our mission is to prepare the nation for elections as soon as possible after order is restored," Zournatzis told newsmen.

Economic development post decision tonight

The immediate future of the full-time city economic development director position will be determined tonight by the City Council at their 7:30 o'clock meeting at the Municipal Building.

The council will decide whether to grant the city economic development committee permission to interview applicants for the position. Commenting on the upcoming action, Mayor Jerry Jones termed it "the most important decision the council will make this year in terms of long-range plans for the city."

The council, at their Nov. 5 meeting, declined to immediately grant the committee permission to proceed interviewing candidates for the position vacated Sept. 1 by Bill Hall. The request was made by Don Broadus, First Ward Republican, who is also a member of the committee.

At the meeting, Democratic councilmen

Carl Franklin, Lee Garrison and Bob Wells joined in questioning the need for a full-time economic development office.

First ward Democrat Jesse Robinson and fourth ward Republican George Dugan supported Broadus.

Regarding another long-range city question recently deliberated by the Council, members of the Sedalia Jaycees will present a letter to council members requesting their responses to specific questions concerning the full-time mayor controversy.

In other action, the sewer bond steering committee is expected to make a bid-acceptance recommendation on a project to repair and refurbish the downtown sewer system. Bids on the projects, received at the Nov. 5 council meeting, ranged from $430,000 by K-Mo Co., Kansas City, to the low bid of $140,036 by Pressure Concrete Construction Co., Florence, Ala.

Therapy Center fund drive near $8,000

About $8,000 has been collected so far in this year's annual Children's Therapy Center fund-raising drive, an increase of about $700 over last year's donations at this time. Bill Brown, honorary campaign chairman, announced Monday.

According to a Center spokesman, the drive will continue for about a month even though the door-to-door fund-raising effort was held in Sedalia over the weekend.

The Center is anticipating mail-in donations from persons who were not at home when the drive volunteers called on them Saturday and Sunday.

Roger Garlich, Center director, reported Monday that about 800 persons toured the new facility for both the Center and the Pettis County Sheltered Workshop during open house Sunday.

Senate near passage of energy bill

WASHINGTON (AP) — A Senate smarting from charges of inaction is nearing expected passage of emergency legislation that would give President Nixon most of the powers he says he needs to meet the energy crisis.

But the bill, which was scheduled for a final vote late this afternoon, could not become law until some time next week at the earliest, since it also must pass the House which does not return from Thanksgiving recess until Nov. 26.

In his Saturday news conference, President Nixon said Congress had not acted on energy proposals he had made as long as two years ago. Nixon said Congress had sent him only one of his seven pieces of priority energy legislation, the Alaska pipeline bill.

Senate Majority Leader Mike Mansfield, D-Mont., reacted to the President's statement by saying flatly, "He is wrong." Appearing Sunday on NBC's "Meet the Press," Mansfield accused the President of being long on rhetoric and proposals but short on specific legislative programs.

Sen. William Proxmire, D-Wis., appearing on CBS' "Face the Nation," said Nixon's statement was "very hard to understand." Proxmire said "the President simply hasn't grasped" the severity of the situation, which according to a Library of Congress study could result in fuel shortages of up to 35 per cent.

David Rockefeller, head of the Chase Manhattan Bank in New York, predicted that the crisis could lead to a zero growth rate for the nation next year and a 6 per cent drop in industrial production. Rockefeller, interviewed on ABC's "Issues and Answers," said the economists' best estimates is that the fuel shortages will result in a cut of $3 million a day in the economy's growth.

Mansfield and Proxmire also differed with the President on the need for gasoline rationing. Nixon said in his televised press conference he hoped to avoid rationing.

According to Mansfield, Nixon's reluctance to impose rationing is "just paving the way to a recession next year." Proxmire said, "I think gasoline rationing is essential, we have to have it no matter what happens, no matter how much relief we might even get from the end of the Arab boycott."

The measure before the Senate today would give the President the authority, but not require him, to order rationing of gasoline or any other scarce fuel.

The bill by Sen. Henry M. Jackson, D-Wash., also would authorize such energy-saving steps as lowered thermostats, reduced speed limits and shorter school days. Another energy-conservation measure, which the President had not asked for, would cut the size of the federal government's limousine fleet.

On the counter of Mrs. Hugelman's office rested a wooden nutbowl, carved by Gentry Purvis from original city hall timbers. Hanging on the east and south walls were paintings and pencil drawings by local artists Mrs. Sharon Mateja, Mrs. Myrna Ragar, Skip Shulz, and Mrs. Sherri Schott.

City Clerk Ralph Dedrick said his box of 1,000 blue souvenir pens, bearing the date of the dedication, was emptied by 3 p.m. And, Dedrick said, "they still kept on coming up until around 5 o'clock."

Tours plant

Rep. William Randall toured the Permaneer plant Saturday afternoon and talked with George Breeze, maintenance supervisor, and Gerald W. Seim, plant manager about current industrial problems. Randall is shown examining a fork lift which uses propane gas as fuel. He advised the Permaneer officials to investigate the possibility of switching to a different type of power for the vehicles due to the present energy crisis.

Permaneer officials meet with Randall

Executive of a major local industry, concerned about the energy crisis and other matters, met with Rep. William J. Randall Saturday to talk over problems.

Jerry Seim, manager of the Permaneer plant, said an immediate problem is the shortage of propane, which fuels the plant's 20 fork lifts. Seim said the plant was operating at 85 per cent of last year's propane allocation, and said that while there was no immediate problem, "it looks like it's going to get worse."

Seim said it would cost $200,000 to convert the fork lifts to electrical power, and said gasoline conversion would be impossible because of the problem of fumes.

High home mortgage interest rates, which directly affect Permaneer, were also discussed with Randall, said Seim. Permaneer manufactures pre-finished, pre-hung door units, and has suffered from the decline in housing starts, said Seim.

Since July, Permaneer has almost halved its work force, going from 300 to 170, and has eliminated one shift.

Seim said the firm was interested in the export market, particularly Japan, and discussed this possibility with Randall.

Former Israeli premier suffers serious stroke

TEL AVIV (AP) — David Ben-Gurion, who led Israel from its violent birth in 1948 into modern statehood, was in critical condition today after suffering a stroke, hospital officials say.

A Tel Hashomer Hospital spokesman said that the 87-year-old former premier had been "calm and sleeping" since he entered the hospital Sunday after being stricken at his apartment here.

Ben-Gurion's personal physician, Dr. Boleslaw Goldman, said a blood clot on the right side of Ben-Gurion's brain had paralyzed the right side of his body.

Dr. Goldman said Ben-Gurion was conscious and "feeling better" after receiving treatment throughout the night. "We have hopes for his recovery, but they are guarded," he said.

Ben-Gurion resigned as premier in 1963. After several more stormy years in parliament, he retired from public life in 1970 to spend most of his time in quiet seclusion at his home in Sde Boquer, a kibbutz in the Negev.

He first arrived in Palestine, the land later to become Israel, as a 20-year-old immigrant from Poland in 1906. Working as a laborer at the Jewish settlements that were then springing up in Palestine, he became a leading figure among Palestinian Jews under Turkish and then British rule.

Expelled by the Turks in 1915, he went to the United States to raise money for the Zionist cause. There he met and married Paula Munwess, who died in 1968.

When the British finally left on May 14, 1948, Ben-Gurion declared Israel an independent state and led his people in the fierce fighting with the Arabs that followed.

outside activities. Jones invited the audience to deposit any personal effects they would like to relinquish for posterity. Among those responding was Police Chief William Miller, who dropped in his Fraternal Order of Policemen identification card. Other odds-and-ends deposited included a 1973 penny and a Sedalia Democrat press card.

"I just hope it lasts longer than the other one," an unknown voice in the crowd quipped. The cornerstone to the original city hall building was never discovered during excavating work on the old building site this summer.

Because of a desire to officially itemize the contents of the capsule, the container itself wasn't imbedded into the wall of the building Sunday. A spokesman for the Dean Construction Co. Monday indicated the container will be sealed and placed in the wall niche sometime Tuesday.

An estimated 2,000 people inspected the Municipal Building during the open house Sunday, which continued to about 5 p.m.

Lon Nol not injured in palace bombing

PHNOM PENH (AP) — A Cambodian air force fighter bombed President Lon Nol's palace compound this afternoon with four 250-pound bombs, witnesses reported.

They said Lon Nol was unhurt, but three other Cambodians were reported killed and 10 wounded.

Antiaircraft gunners around the palace said the plane, a propeller-driven T28, approached the compound from the east and dropped two bombs at 4:30 p.m.

The pilot, Lt. Pech Lim Kuong, was on a mission to bomb on Phnom Penh's southern perimeter around the Highway 2 region, military sources said.

The lieutenant was reported to have told the air base control tower that he had some engine trouble and he could not continue his mission and that he was returning to base.

The control tower radioed it was okay for him to return.

He diverted on his way and headed toward Lon Nol's palace instead of landing as two other planes on the mission had done, military sources at Cambodian headquarters said.

On Highway 5, Khmer Rouge ground attacks on Kompong Tralach and Trapeang Trey Ros villages, 41 miles north of the capital, declined somewhat but insurgent shelling increased, the informants said.

A Cambodian air force spotter plane observed a Khmer Rouge concentration massing on Highway 5 north of Sala Lek Pram, 39 miles north of Phnom Penh, and T28 fighter planes were called in to bomb the positions. No details were reported.

Insurgent forces occupy a five-mile strip of road beginning two miles north of Sala Lek Pram. The highway has been closed since Sept. 6.

Discrepancy in shooting reports probed

(Democrat-Capital Service)

WARSAW — The question of who shot Phillip Long, 29, Kansas City, south of here about 6 a.m. Saturday still remains a problem for Benton County sheriff's officers.

A sheriff's department spokesman said Monday that authorities had begun investigating a discrepancy in reports.

Oley Magness, 37, House Springs, Mo., told Benton County Sheriff Bob Breshears and Conservation Agent Cal Christenson that he accidentally shot Long after he had mistaken him for a deer.

Long Saturday told Bothwell Hospital personnel that he was walking across a field toward a wooded area when a pickup truck stopped, a man got out and shot him.

Long was transferred Sunday from Bothwell Hospital to St. Luke's Hospital in Kansas City.

"We've done some investigating," the spokesman said, "but we're still trying to get a statement from Long." The spokesman added that the sheriff's department had been unable to talk to Long Monday morning.

Magness said a hunting companion of his went to a nearby farm to summon an ambulance for Long.

Long reportedly suffered a broken leg.

Fifth member of arbitration board selected

Four members of the local arbitration board that will hear the Pettis County Court's dispute with Pettis County Firefighters Local No. 2228 selected a fifth person Sunday night to serve as board chairman.

Ray Hendricks, a board member and president of the Sedalia Federation of Labor, declined to name the person because, he said, the person has not been officially notified of his selection. Hendricks added that the appointment would be announced after the person accepted the position.

A four-man arbitration board was appointed by the court last month to hear the court's dispute with the union concerning the court's Sept. 12 firing of county firefighter Danny Taylor. LaMonte, a union member. The union contends Taylor was dismissed by the court because he was a union member. The county court judges deny this.

Hendricks said Monday that arbitration hearings will begin next month.

Other members of the board are Herb Ford, business representative for the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers Local 124; James Harvey, farm representative at Union Savings Bank; and Larry McRoy, manager of Sedalia Computer Services.

The court selected Ford and Hendricks to the board from a list of four names submitted by the union. McRoy and Harvey were appointed directly by the court.

State statute says that a fifth member of the arbitration board must be selected by the four other board members.

Two Sedalia men stabbed in Carrollton

Two Sedalians were stabbed while attending a party early Sunday morning in Carrollton, Mo., according to Sedalia police.

According to the police report on the incident, Kent Craig, 22, 2400 South Grand, and James Knothe, 24, his wife and daughter, 1906 South Osage, were attending the party about 2:30 a.m. when a man, whose name is not known, reportedly began to strike his wife and knocked her to the floor. He then pulled a knife and brandished it in front of those present.

Craig told police that he then attempted to help the woman to her feet and was stabbed in the back by the man.

According to the report, Knothe then went to Craig's assistance and began to scuffle with the man and received four small stab wounds in the back and a slash wound on the palm of his left hand.

The two men drove back to Sedalia in Craig's car and were treated for the wounds at Bothwell Hospital.

The report stated that charges stemming from the incident would be filed in Carroll County by Craig and Knothe.

Danish government curbs energy use

COPENHAGEN, Denmark (AP) — The Danish government today banned private driving on Sundays, ordered sales of heating oil cut by a fourth and curbed the use of electricity to a point that spells the darkest Christmas since World War II.

The oil-saving measures, approved unanimously by a special parliamentary committee, came on top of 10-day-old speed limits of 50 miles per hour on highways and 37 m.p.h. on urban streets.

Denmark's tough cutbacks reflected the severe energy shortage created in Western Europe by Arab oil delivery reductions, imposed to pressure Israel and its supporters during the October Middle East war.

The Netherlands and Belgium already have banned Sunday driving and other countries are weighing that possibility along with a string of other energy-saving decrees such as speed limits.

Denmark's economy measures included a ban on all outdoor illumination, which means Christmas street lights will be out this year.

'Just looking' is seller's peeve

Dear Ann Landers: Do a lot of people a favor and print this. It's for those folks who are "just looking."

I've been working in retail shops for 30 years. If I don't know the score by now I never will. I can tell a buyer from a "looker" a mile away. But some of the less experienced salespeople can't. It's no crime to walk into a store and browse. Many shops encourage it. But it isn't fair to tie up a salesperson for 30 minutes trying on everything in the place just to kill time. That salesperson might be on commission. While he is fooling around with you he may be losing important commissions on serious customers.

So please tell your readers to play fair. If they are "just looking," it's perfectly O.K. But have the courtesy to say so. — Falling Arches.

Dear Arch I'm sure you know your business better than I do but some "lookers" turn into buyers. Moreover, the salesperson who is courteous and friendly to everyone who walks into a store whether he buys or not is going to run a bigger book in the long haul.

Dear Ann Landers: My 9-year-old brother has figured out a way to annoy me and I am at his mercy. He creeps up behind me very quietly and I don't know he's there. He suddenly grabs me around the neck like he's going to strangle me and screams "I gotcha!" I live in Boston so you can see how serious this is.

Will you please tell me what I can do to protect myself? I have told Mom and she says it's not such a terrible thing and she doesn't want to hear any more about it. I am 13 years old and I read your column every single day. I need some of your good advice. — Brookline Goosepimples

Dear Goose: People who are frightened in that manner have been known to throw a wild punch at the unknown attacker — in self-defense, of course. I am a believer in non-violence, but there are times (like Pearl Harbor) when it is imperative that retaliatory measures be taken.

Dear Ann Landers: I do not agree that "so long as children get an allowance anyway" they should get paid for doing chores around the house.

The "what's in it for me" attitude is all too prevalent in our society. Why should we promote it by paying a child for cleaning up his own room?

Our son would no sooner expect to be paid for taking out the family garbage than I would expect to be paid for cooking a meal. He doesn't expect to be paid for taking out the garbage for the elderly lady next door either, but sometimes she bakes cookies for him. No charge.

Our oldest daughter babysits for us and for a young mother who recently lost her husband. Sometimes she is paid with money and other times with words of appreciation, but she doesn't feel underpaid either way.

Our children are richer for having learned that family members help each other and expect nothing in return. In this way they learn to help others. And isn't this what brotherly love is all about? — Rich But Not Wealthy In Austin

Dear R. But Not W.: I happen to believe that tying daily chores to a child's allowance is a good way to teach the relationship between work, responsibility and rewards. There are still many things a child can do for which he gets nothing more than warm thanks. And every parent should see to it that his child gets those opportunities.

Teen-age girl accidentally shot

ST. LOUIS (AP)—St. Louis police say a 15-year-old girl was killed Sunday night when a gun she and a friend were looking at discharged, wounding her in the chest.

Vernee Marshall was pronounced dead on arrival at a city hospital following the accidental shooting, authorities said.

Soaring wheat prices blamed for bread costs

WASHINGTON (AP)—Soaring wheat prices at the farm are the major reason why bread has gone up five cents a loaf at the supermarket during the past year, according to a new government study.

The average retail cost of a one-pound loaf of white bread in September was 29.5 cents, up 4.9 cents from July 1972. Of that increase, higher prices for wheat accounted for three cents, according to Agriculture Department figures.

When other farm-produced ingredients such as shortening and milk are included, the "farm value" of products in a loaf of bread was a record seven cents in September, up from 3.6 cents in July last year.

The new figures are included in a quarterly Marketing and Transportation System report issued by the department's Economic Research Service.

Retail bread prices went up sharpest in September, averaging 2.3 cents per loaf more than in August and three cents more than July, the report said.

"Following the removal of the freeze on food prices in July, bread-type wheat prices rose from $2.82 per bushel to $4.61 at the (flour) mill level and the price of flour delivered to bakers jumped from $7.18 per hundredweight to $11.21," the report said.

The price of wheat at the farm in September was $4.38 per bushel, based on an average price in 10 major wheat producing states, the report said.

In July 1972, just as the Soviet Union was purchasing huge quantities of U.S. wheat, the bread grain averaged $1.31 per bushel at the farm, according to USDA records.

At that time bread sold in supermarkets for 24.6 cents per loaf. The farm value of wheat in a loaf was 2.6 cents and other ingredients one cent, a total of 3.6 cents for all farm products.

By Sept. 1973 the value of wheat in a loaf was 5.6 cents and other ingredients were up to 1.4 cents, the report said.

Lunch break

A white rhino, one of 20 released recently at the Lion Country Safari near Ashland, Va., takes a lunch break after an 8,000-mile trip from its home in South Africa. The rhinos represent the largest shipment of African animals ever flown into the United States. The animals weighed between 900 and 2,300 pounds each and are valued at more than $200,000. The safari will open in April. (UPI)

Lawrence Lamb, M.D.

Girl's own diet is her problem

DEAR DR. LAMB — I've been putting off writing this letter for some time now out of fear. I'm afraid of what might be wrong with me.

The problem is much too complicated to explain in detail, but I am a girl, almost 18. Recently I dieted and lost 20 to 25 pounds on my own. I paid attention to nutrition and proper exercise, but I wasn't under medical supervision. I have absolutely no idea if the loss of weight has anything to do with my problem, but I'd like it known that I have been on a diet while this was happening.

I haven't had my menstrual period for over six months (I'm not pregnant). I've become irritable, tired, depressed and my legs and soles of my feet hurt so much sometimes I can barely walk. I don't know what is wrong.

I've not mentioned this to anyone yet. Right now I just want to know what to do. If I were 45 years old, I might believe I was going through the menopause, but I'm only 17, so I'm worried that it might be a disease or possibly a type of cancer. I'm terrified, doctor. Please, please write and tell me what is wrong. I'm so scared and worried I can't sleep half the time, and I feel like crying or something.

DEAR READER — You are pretty good at making a diagnosis. Probably most of your problems are related to that do-it-yourself diet program you have been on. There are a lot of problems caused by dieting. I'm one of the strongest proponents for staying slim and preventing obesity, but not by measures that can and will destroy your health.

The longer I write this column and see people, the more convinced I am that most of the public hasn't the foggiest idea of how much trouble they can cause themselves with ill-advised diet programs. Unfortunately some of these programs are advised on a nationwide scale.

In 1950 Dr. Ancel Keys and his group at the University of Minnesota studied young, healthy people by putting them on a 1600 calorie diet. They lost weight and lost their sexual desire, in some their hair fell out. There were personality changes, very much like you now describe. Almost all seemed withdrawn, irritable and old before their time.

That is only the beginning. It took six months for most of them to regain their health, after starting on a high calorie diet and rehabilitation program. Mind you, all of these problems occurred while eating 1600 calories a day of a pretty good diet, no doubt much better than the one you have been on.

Those sore feet may well mean a vitamin deficiency. And, semi-starvation can lead to stopping menstruation.

The first thing I would advise is that you begin at once to eat a good nutritious diet, in accordance with your appetite.

Then see a doctor to be sure you don't have any other problems. I would think, though, that with a good, sound, nutrition program directed toward regaining your health, plenty of vitamins, and protein that you could regain your old zest for living in a few months. I hope your letter reminds many others that food is the source of your energy and health. If you want to keep health and energy, you are smart to stay off those foolish, "do-it-yourself" diets.

We hear a lot about agriculture and the environment. Don't forget how much agriculture improves the environment.

Research has shown that actively growing grass on a plot of 25 square feet releases enough oxygen to sustain life day after day for a living person. It also purifies the air, traps dust particles, eliminates bad odors, transpires moisture, washes the air, muffles noise, controls sun glare, helps prevent wind and water erosion, and beautifies the area.

Weed control

At this time of the year, not much concern is expressed about weed control in legumes. However, several observations in fields of alfalfa and clover revealed considerable growth of winter annual weeds such as henbit, chickweed and yellow rocket, according to David Lindell, area agronomy specialist.

DNBP may be applied from 1 to 1½ pounds (active equivalent) of the amine salt of DNBP in late fall when the legumes are dormant. A second application may be made in early winter if necessary when the legumes are still dormant. DNBP may be used on alfalfa, red clover, ladino clover and birdsfoot trefoil. Don't graze treated fields before the first cutting. DNBP is most effective when applied on a warm fall day.

CIPC — Apply to established alfalfa at rates of 2 pounds per acre (active ingredient) when the crop is dormant or after first cutting. CIPC is less effective on other broad-leaved annual weeds than chickweed.

Princept (Simazine) — Apply at 1 pound per acre (active ingredient) to control winter annual weeds in dormant alfalfa and birdsfoot trefoil. This period would be from early December through January. Princept should not be applied to alfalfa or birdsfoot trefoil less than one year old because of possible injury.

For more details on chemical weed control for legumes pick up UMC Agricultural Guide 4546 at the County Extension Center.

Metric system

Some of the tractors and other farm machines now on the market in this country are manufactured abroad. Major farm machinery companies now make tractors, combines, and other equipment for use in other countries. The U.S. is the only major power and one of the remaining 22 countries now not using the metric system. This creates a problem in selecting bolt sizes and other measurements for any manufacturer doing business in countries using different measuring systems.

Some machinery now being sold in the U.S. use metric bolts and measurements either completely or partially.

The farm machinery industry is moving toward uniform use of the metric system. We can soon expect to see recommended combine cylinder-concave clearance of 9 to 13 mm rather than ¾ to 1 inch. After an initial conversion problem we should find the metric system simpler.

You will need a new set of metric wrenches. Many mechanics already have them.

Fescue foot

Fescue foot season may soon be with us. With the amount of rainfall and good regrowth of fescue, we expect less trouble than we had last year. Your continued cooperation is sought in reporting cases of fescue foot to us. We want a record of the number of incidences and also, to get samples from selective

Steering committee for black mayors

TUSKEGEE, Ala. (AP) — The final session of the three-day Southern Conference of Black Mayors ended Sunday with the selection of a steering committee.

Selected at the meeting were Mayors A.J. Cooper of Pritchett, Ala.; chairman; Charles Evers of Fayette, Miss.; Howard S. Lee of Chapel Hill, N.C.; Johnny Ford of Tuskegee, Ala.; David Humes of Hayti Heights, Mo.; and Clarence Lightner of Raleigh, N.C.

The committee will work in association with President Nixon's Domestic Council.

The next meeting of the conference will be in December in conjunction with the U.S. Conference of Mayors to be held in San Juan, P.R.

cases which will help us in our effort to elucidate the cause.

You will find a brief summary of where we are in research at the Extension office. As cases occur, please fill in the post-card at the Extension office. Should you have a case in herds over 25 in size where at least 50 per cent of the animals are affected within 10 days of the time they are placed on a given fescue field, we would appreciate immediate notice.

Exterior plywood

The only paint recommended for use on exterior plywood is exterior acrylic latex paint. Plywood has a tendency to develop surface cracks or checks over time. Oil base paints will crack and flake off during this checking process. The acrylic latex forms a more flexible surface film and resists peeling even though the wood surface develops small cracks under it. Acrylic latex should be applied over a primer as recommended by the manufacturer. Experience has shown that paint performance will be better when both the paint and primer are from the same manufacturer. Paints will give the best performance when brushed on rather than rolled or sprayed.

Stains are unquestionably the preferred finish for exterior plywood; particularly if one of the rough or textured surfaces has been selected. Stains also work best when applied by brush. If a sprayer is used for staining, the surface should be dry brushed immediately after spraying to work the stain into the cracks and crevices and develop a uniform appearance.

Mobile home tiedown

After the tornados and strong winds in 1973 in our area, you and the insurance company will want anchors. Two types of ties are needed: the over-the-top tie and the frame tie. The first keeps the unit from overturning and the second prevents it from being blown off the supports.

Frame ties can also reduce the chance of overturn, but many mobile homes do not have enough internal strength to transmit high wind loads to the supporting steel frame. Thus, installation solely of frame ties will secure the frame, but the unit resting on the frame may blow away. Therefore, the Defense Civil Preparedness Agency recommends use of both over-the-top ties and frame ties to secure 10, 12 and 14 foot wide mobile homes. Double units 24 feet in width are quite stable and do not require use of over-the-top ties, only frame ties.

The ties are made of wire rope or rust resistant steel strap which "tie" the mobile home and its steel frame to anchors embedded in the ground. The cable or strap is secured to the anchor with a yoke-type fastener and tension device, or with clamps and turnbuckles.

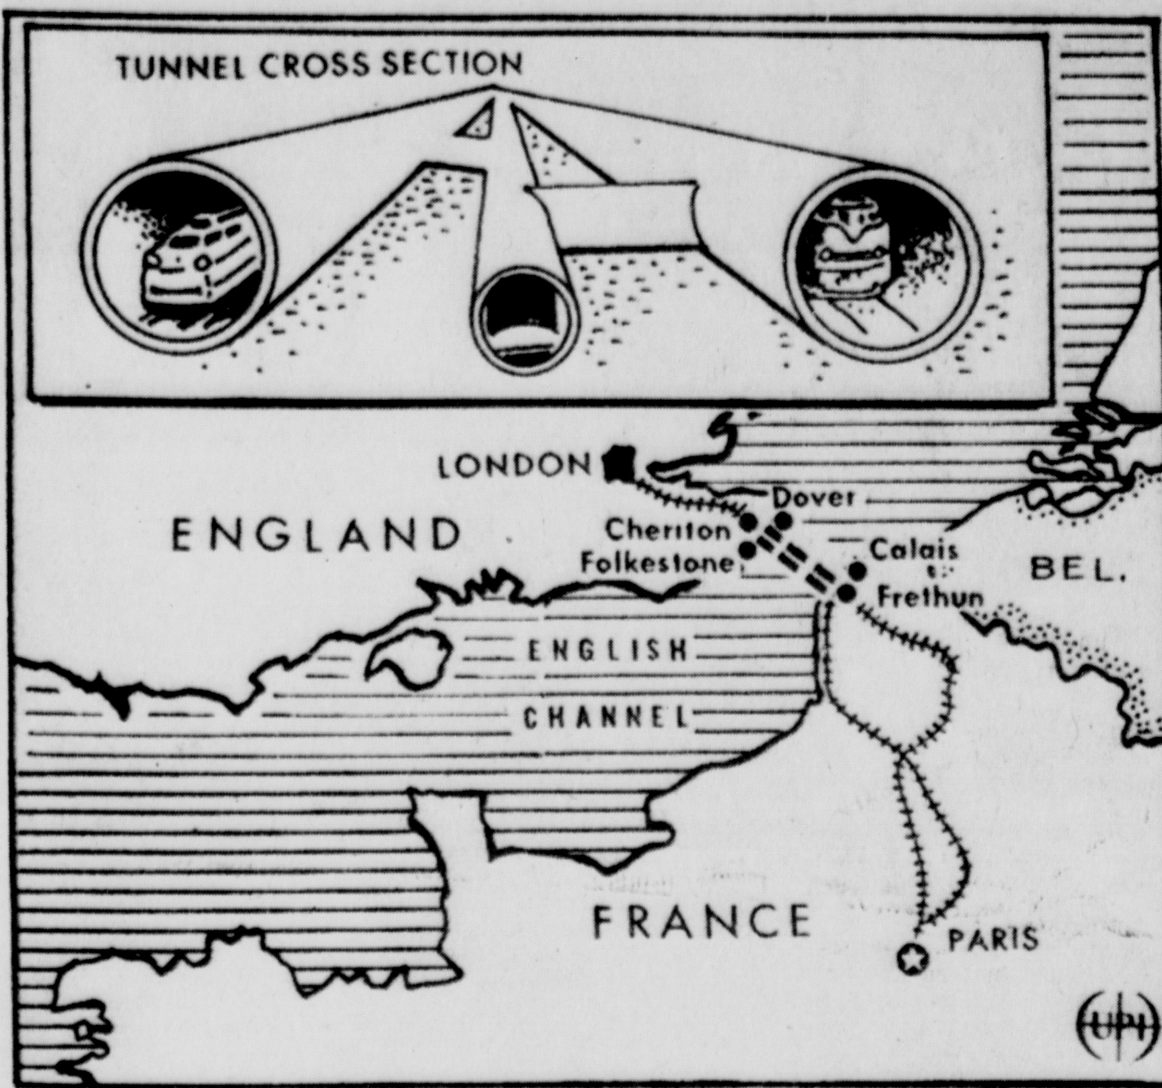

The over-the-top tie is secured to an anchor on each side of the mobile home. Frame ties connect the steel beam supporting the unit to the anchors. Several of each type of tie, with connections and anchors, must be used for an effective tie-down of the whole unit.

Over-the-top ties should be located within two feet of each end of the mobile home, and others as needed at intervals between, at stud locations. Commercially available adapters or wood blocks should be used to prevent sharp bends in over-the-top ties, and to keep them from cutting into the unit when tension is applied.

Manufacturers of mobile homes increasingly are including concealed tiedown straps under the skin in new units. The homes are thus more attractive than when exposed tiedowns must be used. The concealed straps still must be secured to ground anchors, and frame ties must also be installed.

Office closed

The Pettis County Extension office in the Federal Building will be closed both Thursday and Friday.

Connecting the continents

Britain and France Saturday signed a historic agreement to build a tunnel under the English Channel, linking Britain to the European continent, 178 years after the idea of a land link was first proposed. The signing climaxed a two-day summit meeting between French President Georges Pompidou and British Prime Minister Edward Heath. (UPI)

NEW YORK (AP) — A very serious situation but not a crisis. An inevitable economic slowdown, perhaps a recession, but not one of pronounced or prolonged impact. Instead, an effect more like that of a strike in a basic industry.

The personal consequences of the slowdown will be felt not only in some uncomfortably cool homes before the end of the year, but more seriously in the form of rising prices, factory shutdowns and layoffs.

While opinions vary, this appears to be close to a popular consensus among professional economists who spent the past week studying, in some cases frantically, the implications of the Arab oil boycott.

For some of them, the oil situation represented a brand-new dimension in economic forecasting in which they felt somewhat inadequate, forced to reach conclusions based on political assumptions.

Said Prof. Walter Heller, chief economic adviser in the Kennedy and Johnson administrations: "At the end of each day 50 per cent of what I know I learned that day."

Told of the remark, Alan Greenspan, economist with the consulting firm of Townsend-Greenspan & Co., and a frequent adviser to President Nixon, commented: "He's in advance of most of us."

The assumption all economists agree upon is that a reduction in energy almost certainly means a reduction in production. As one put it, "An industrial economy simply replaces human muscle power with fuel power."

Based on studies for utility and other clients over the years, Pierre Rinfret, head of Rinfret-Boston Associates and another sometime adviser to Nixon, reached this conclusion: "In order for the Gross National Product to grow 2.4 per cent we need a 2 per cent increase in energy. For every shortfall of 1 per cent in energy we'll have a 1.3 per cent shortfall in GNP."

"If we are short 2 per cent in energy in 1974 we would have zero growth."

Most economists agree that two factors can significantly change the impact:

1. The unwelcome effects might be appreciably reduced by the extent of voluntary cooperation and economies in nonessential areas.

2. The impact would be made more serious by a prolonged boycott, or one that extends well into spring.

Leif Olsen, vice president and economist of First National City Bank, for example, believes the slowdown could become a recession if the boycott extends beyond six months.

For the past year Otto Eckstein, head of Data Resources Inc., of Lexington, Mass., has been feeding data on the developing energy shortage into an intricate economic model of the economy.

Eckstein, economic adviser in the Johnson administration, numbers among his clients about 40 banks, 40 brokers, 150 corporations and the Energy Policy Committee itself. He has just completed his latest printouts.

"We had already forecast a soft landing for the economy," said Eckstein, referring to the descent from a three-year boom. That soft landing would have meant 2.5 per cent growth. Now he has lowered it to 1 per cent.

In other words, he continues to foresee growth, but of a lesser degree. And accompanying it he sees a sharp jump in prices. Instead of 6.2 per cent inflation he now foresees an annual rate of more than 7 per cent. More encouraging, according to Eckstein the rate should fall below as conditions improve during the year. But at the beginning of 1974 he sees prices jumping by as much as 8 or 9 per cent on an annual basis.

Heat 1890 style

Pat Rozycki dumps coal into her 1890 coal stove used to heat the Anything Old Antiques store in St. Cloud, Minn. At the current rate of coal — about $25 a ton — it should take three tons to heat the store during winter. The stove sold for $23.90 from the Sears and Roebuck catalog in 1890. (UPI)

New K.C. police chief confronted by shootings

KANSAS CITY (AP) — Kansas City's new chief of police, up from the sidewalks of New York and following in the footsteps of the man who now heads the FBI, has marched into a public furor.

A county grand jury refused Friday to indict one of Chief Joseph D. McNamara's men who shot 15-year-old Rory Lark who was reported fleeing from a house burglary Monday.

The 38-year-old chief responded within an hour by setting up a special inquiry to decide whether the patrolman violated the department's own regulations.

At the same time, McNamara issued a new directive. It said that from now on a policeman is not to fire unless his life or the life of another is in jeopardy, where the suspect is unarmed and where no crime of violence has been committed.

McNamara went on: "It will be the officer's responsibility to be certain that he never fires at a juvenile except when the officer's or another person's life is in immediate jeopardy, and then only as a last resort."

McNamara reputedly is the only cop in the country with a doctor's degree from Harvard. He is from an old-line family of New York policemen and started his own career on a beat in Harlem 17 years ago. When he came to Kansas City to plug the hole left when Clarence M. Kelley became director of the FBI, he was confronted with a question which went something like this:

"Some feel Kansas City policemen are shooting too many people, particularly blacks. Some feel the police are not shooting enough. Where do you stand?"

The question about policemen shooting people was put to McNamara because that was about the only cautionary raised in Kansas City when Kelley was under scrutiny as successor to J. Edgar Hoover.

Chief McNamara indicated to a news conference an intention of using the Rory Lark shooting as a case in point for a new philosophy about policemen shooting people.

Authorities said two cars answered a report of a prowler on Kansas City's southeast side Monday.

They said Patrolman Joe E. Williams, two years on the force, took a back door as three boys ran across the yard.

Investigators quoted Williams and his partner as saying Williams called several times for the boys to stop. They said two did, but Lark did not, and was killed with a 12-gauge riot gun at 50 feet. Officers said his pockets yielded two rings worth $5, which had been stolen from the house.

Patrolman Williams is black, as was Lark.

McNamara continued Williams on suspension with pay and set up a five-man board of inquiry to determine if the officer violated department regulations which were in effect at the time of the shooting. The chief named Major Leroy Swift, a black, to head the board.

Missouri law entitles an officer to shoot anyone in flight from a burglary or other crime for which he might be sent to prison.

"Whether or not police department rules were violated is another question," McNamara told the news conference.

The old rules condone the shooting of fleeing felons but says:

"The discharge of a firearm is prohibited to effect the apprehension of anyone known to be or believed to be a juvenile unless the juvenile proposes a threat to the life and/or safety of the officer or officers. A juvenile is defined as a youth 16 years of age or younger."

McNamara said there is evidence that Patrolman Williams violated this regulation and the evidence is strong enough to warrant an inquiry.

In the Easter Week riots in Kansas City after the assassination of Martin Luther King there were reports that snipers were active. Six blacks were killed. An investigating commission found that none of the six had a weapon.

McNamara said he had been wrestling with the shooting question ever since he stepped into his job on Nov. 1 and had decided on the new directive before Lark was killed.

"My only regret is that, unfortunately, it came a little late," he said. "I hope that no officer will view my action as showing a lack of support. I have repeatedly emphasized that I will fully support a police officer properly performing his duty."

Will the directive breed an increase in crime by largely reducing the fear of being shot?

No, McNamara said. It will earn the respect of the black community and reduce crime.

"The department regards the talking of a life of a 15-year-old boy as a tragedy," he said. "Bear in mind one thing: All of us eventually will get over this case, but Rory Lark never will."

American art expert found dead

CAIRO (AP) — Egyptian police are investigating the stabbing death of a prominent American expert on ancient art who was found dead in his apartment here Wednesday.

The body of Dr. Edward L.B. Terrace, 37, bore multiple stab wounds of the neck, chest and abdomen, and was covered by a rug when found by his cook, police said.

He was apparently killed Tuesday night. Terrace lived alone in the apartment overlooking the Nile. Friends said two cameras and money were found missing.

A recognized authority on Egyptian and ancient near Eastern art, Terrace had worked here since 1971 as a project director for the Princeton-based American Research Center.

This hungry world — Part II

The protein crisis: One dead child in four

By Aileen Claire

NEW YORK — While food scientists and food processors congratulate each other because they can "spin" meat imitations (analog) from soy protein, can grow edible high quality protein using yeast and bacteria on urine, manure, petroleum products, paper or garbage, 10,000 people in the world die every day from malnutrition.

This is primarily due to the lack of adequate protein in their diet. That makes 3.5 million people a year who never will know the joys of dining on eggless eggs, shrimp-less shrimp or meatless roasts.

According to the United Nations, 25 to 30 per cent of all children die before their fifth birthday. Those who do live are stunted physically and mentally for life because they suffer from protein-deficiency diseases such as kwashiorkor.

Moreover, some 40 million non-starvation deaths a year are related to hunger. Crippling and killing infectious diseases strike down those weakened by a constantly poor diet from the day they were born.

How can this be? About 118.7 million tons of protein are produced yearly throughout the world, according to John A. Pino, director of agricultural sciences for The Rockefeller Foundation. Theoretically, this should be enough for the present world population.

But with the world's skyrocketing population, even this theoretical sufficiency is fast disappearing. The world is on the brink of a protein crisis.

The rude fact is that as developing countries pull themselves up by their sandals, the rich get richer and the poor get poorer (or, as the lyric originally was, get children.)

Pino explains that as income rises in the small, relatively affluent sectors of the population in such countries as India, Pakistan, Bangladesh, Malaysia, Colombia, Peru and some African states, the gross increase in consumption of meat, milk and other animal proteins masks a backlash effect on the poor, who suffer most from malnutrition.

In countries where the yearly income is $100, or often far less, the diet is based upon cereal grains, wheat, corn, rice.

For example, as middle and upper income groups demand beef, pork, poultry or lamb, more acreage is planted in animal feed grains cutting down the supply of human food grains and raising their prices.

Even at an optimistic rate of 2 per cent annual increase in income, it would take 100 years for those in the less than $100-a-year group to afford enough animal protein just to meet their minimum needs.

The answer, Pino believes, is to improve the quality of cereal grains which are the staple for the world's poor. The Green Revolution which led to the planting of high yielding wheat varieties in Mexico, part of India and Pakistan, Pino says, was thought by many to be the hungry world's manna. It was merely a seed for other projects, world food experts now admit.

Pino believes the key to righting the protein imbalance rests with improving the cereals and introducing more legume — fava beans, cow peas for lowland tropics, pigeon pea, lentils, soybeans and, a most complete food, the chick pea (garbanzo) — to combine with the corn, rice or wheat now eaten.

Pino's experience with Indians in Mexico has been that it is best not to change the look or taste of food which they are accustomed to eating. Adding lysine to corn genetically raises its protein quality without changing its look.

In underdeveloped countries, he continues, changing the cereal composition, improving yield per acre and improving quality of legumes must also be done so that it does not require that the already poor native buy something extra.

In Mexico, for example, Pino is encouraged that many natives are double-cropping by growing vine beans with their maize. The corn-bean diet that results is a rather complete, if monotonous, one.

Higher yielding, higher quality protein cereal grains grown locally also will improve the future lot of children in countries where they exist on rice, casava root or banana root, low in healthful nutrients. It is almost impossible for a person, especially a child, to consume enough food in bulk of casava or banana root to get his protein requirement.

Taboos or traditions also block many well-meaning efforts to change eating patterns of the impoverished and uneducated. For example, in most hurting nations the male adult gets the most and highest quality food because he is the laborer, then comes pregnant and lactating women and at the end of the food line are the children under 5 who need the largest amounts of protein. In India beef still remains taboo; Moslems eat no pork; in Africa some tribes frown upon women eating eggs, even when they are available.

The development of engineered foods from soybeans, algae, fermentation and fish meal concentrates are not the panacea to world hunger and malnutrition many would like them to be, Pino points out.

"People who have no money can't buy these for themselves even if they would eat the resulting foods which most of them won't. They can't buy them to feed animals either. These items must be made available free from their own governments."

A major infusion of protein for the world depends on the eradication by scientist of the tsetse fly. Currently, one-third of the African continent and much of Latin America are closed to cattle farming because of this pest. Otherwise, the land could support 120 million head of cattle.

Even though Pino, and other food scientists, nutritionists and economists sound a pessimistic note, Pino admits that he is optimistic that right steps are being taken so that in the next decade 10,000 people a day will not die for lack of nutritionally sound food.

TUSKEGEE, Ala. (AP) — Alabama Gov. George C. Wallace has made an unprecedented appearance here before the Southern Conference of Black Mayors.

Wallace spoke at the final session Sunday about education, industrial development and social services.

The governor, who for a decade opposed desegregation, said he had worked for a better life for all people, regardless of race, creed or color.

Wallace was interrupted by an outburst of laughter when he said: "Perhaps this is not the time to discuss busing... but I would like to say a few words about the Alabama school bus system." He said any Alabama student, "white or black, can catch a school bus almost in front of his own home and ride to classes."

Saturday, Wallace crowned Miss Terri Points of Birmingham the first black homecoming queen in the history of the University of Alabama.

TEL AVIV (AP) — Seven Democratic congressmen, led by Rep. Benjamin S. Rosenthal of New York, have arrived in Israel.

"We have come to see for ourselves the needs of Israel at this time and how we can help... and to assess Israel's inventory and its needs," Rosenthal said on his arrival Sunday. He is a member of the House Foreign Affairs Committee.

Accompanying Rosenthal were Bella S. Abzug, Joseph P.

Addabbo, Edward I. Koch, and Lester L. Wolff, all House members from New York; Roy A. Taylor of North Carolina, and Charles Wilson of Texas.

DENVER (AP) — Catherine Stanek, the last of the five surviving Stanek sextuplets to remain hospitalized, has been discharged to join her parents and four infant brothers.

The six-weeks premature sextuplets were born Sept. 16 to Edna Stanek, who had taken a fertility drug before becoming pregnant. Eugene Stanek, 34, an accountant, says he and his wife have hired full-time nursing help to assist in caring for the children and are looking for a larger replacement for their three-bedroom suburban home.

The sixth baby, Julia, died several days after birth of severe hyaline membrane disease, a lung ailment that often strikes premature infants. Catherine was released from the hospital Saturday.

TEHRAN, Iran (AP) — King Hussein of Jordan has arrived here for talks with the Shah of Iran on the Middle East situation.

Hussein was welcomed at the airport Sunday by the Shah. Iranian officials would give no details on the purpose or length of the visit.

The king's visit was also thought to involve coordination for a planned Moslem world summit. With the king were Prime Minister Zeid Rifai and top aides.

Bond against Illinois airport

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Gov. Christopher S. Bond is still firmly against locating a new St. Louis airport in the Illinois portion of the metropolitan area, the St. Louis Globe-Democrat reported today.

In a dispatch from Memphis, Tenn., where Bond is attending the Republican Governors' Conference, the newspaper said Bond had not yet been invited to meet with Illinois Gov. Daniel Walker to discuss the airport question.

Illinois Lt. Gov. Neil Hartigan announced recently that Walker would invite Bond to a conference on the airport.

According to the report, Bond said the fuel shortage now makes a new airport at Waterloo, Ill., even more inadvisable. The governor said he is waiting for a proposed master study on Lambert-St. Louis Airport to determine its usefulness.

The Illinois congressional delegation is urging federal officials to locate the new facility in Illinois. Missouri leaders, however, hope to expand Lambert to meet the future aviation needs of the St. Louis area.

Woman arrested in shooting death

ST. LOUIS (AP)—Ethel Rice, 27, has been arrested on suspicion of murder following the shooting death of Bernard Rainey, 43, at her home Sunday night.

Police said Rainey died of wounds in the stomach, side and back.

A rifle was found at the scene of the shooting, police said.

Will energy crisis lead to social turmoil?

WASHINGTON — There ought to be no doubt that this country can stand 68-degree home temperatures, dimly-lit Christmas trees and unheated swimming pools.

Rowan

What it may not be able to surmount is the anger and bitterness flowing out of feelings that some Americans are suffering more than others as a result of the colossal mess the politicians call "the energy crisis."

Nothing tests the mettle of a family more than a demand that it lower its standard of living, which most families clearly are being asked to do. Nothing weakens the inclination toward good-citizenship compliance more than evidence that certain privileged Americans (including those who demand the sacrifices) are not suffering at all, and that some are even reaping a bonanza.

Already we hear the cries of anger, see the signs of growing malice — and we've not seen anything until we get gasoline rationing with all its bureaucratic hanky-panky, or tenants who begin to scream that greedy landlords are using the energy crisis as an excuse to freeze them to death.

Take that presidential recommendation of a 50-mile-an-hour speed limit on the nation's highways. That clearly will discriminate against the bus companies, putting them at an almost intolerable disadvantage with the trains and airlines. It will put a very costly burden on the trucking companies, not to overlook the many thousands of traveling salesmen whose standard of life is a direct reflection of how many towns they get to in a day.

Not that the ordinary bloke is going to like or honor the 50-mile limit, except when a highway patrolman looms in the rear-view mirror. He hasn't even honored 65- and 70-mile limits. Only a massive police operation can impose a 50-mile limit, and every speeding ticket handed out will add to the chorus of voters who will be screaming in indignation: "Who is responsible for this stupid crisis and these crazy rules?"

The ugly recriminations have already begun. A liberal black congressman, Charles B. Rangel of New York, and a very conservative white publisher, William Loeb of the Manchester (N.H.) Union-Leader, are suddenly of the same mind. Both demand that President Nixon set an example of sacrifice by discontinuing those jet trips to Key Biscayne and San Clemente.

"Until I see some genuine sacrifices being made by the President and those others in our society who have been most wasteful of our energy resources," said Rangel, "I will suspect that this administration-declared national energy crisis is only a vehicle for the government and the oil industry to transfer the burden of their bad planning to those in the society least able to bear that burden — the apartment dweller at the mercy of the landlord who wouldn't provide heat even when there was no fuel shortage, and the poor, the very young, the elderly."

An 80-year-old woman called my home past midnight to complain that she had ready a story about how, in the midst of summer, President Nixon wanted his Camp David retreat air-conditioned to such coolness that he could have a blaze in the fireplace. I doubt many 80-year-old women use the language she used to express her indignation.

Sen. William Proxmire (D-Wis.), who runs a lot and has a thing against big cars, is sticking it to the senior officers of government, demanding that they give up their limousines, long sedans and chauffeurs and drive themselves in compact non-gas guzzlers.

The chauffeurs, who like getting paychecks as much as Proxmire, will protest more than the Cabinet officers and agency heads.

Even on a personal level, the class strife edginess has set in. "Why do you drive an air-conditioned car when I manage without one?" a television station technician asked. He might just as well have asked, "Why do you eat file of sole when I buy catfish?" The underlying notion everywhere is that in times of tranquility the little guy suffers most — and in crisis it's he who really gets kicked in the gut.

Difficult it will be to organize a gas-rationing bureaucracy that is less chaotic than in World War II, when most families didn't have two cars in the garage. Even more difficult will be the task of convincing the people that the suffering is shared equitably by the rich, the poor and the in-betweens. But without such convincing the energy crisis will become a national tragedy.

A conservative view

Letter to a new arrival

By JAMES J. KILPATRICK

SCRABBLE, Va. —
Dear Douglas:

I have been writing columns of grandfatherly wisdom off and on for several years in the form of letters to your older sister Heather, but in the thought that grandfatherly wisdom should be expended sparingly, there not being much of it to begin with, I had not intended to make you a literary figure also.

Kilpatrick

Yet the fairness doctrine applies. Heather, at three, has everything going for her: She can run like a colt, talk in big words and make herself a sammich. She is getting old, Heather is, and until you are 18 and she is 21, she is going to seem positively ancient. Big sisters are that way.

By contrast, beloved grandson, you have very little going for you now. You are 10 tiny fingers and 10 tiny toes, a soft pink tongue, and a pair of awesome lungs. Your dark Irish eyes are just beginning to focus on the world of 1973, which you entered two months ago, and all of discovery still lies ahead. But you do have this: With your christening last Sunday, you are now officially and formally a member of the family—a family that embraces a billion brothers, sisters and cousins of every race, color and nationality around the world. Onward, my small Christian soldier, howling as you go!

You were sworn into the Christian brotherhood, renouncing the devil and all his works in a little white-steeped church in Washington, Va. Ecclesiastically speaking, you are thus domiciled in Rappahannock County, in the Commonwealth of Virginia, in the United States of America, on the North American continent, on the planet earth, spinning in a galaxy somewhere in the eternity of space. In the presence of a congregation of 22, mostly aunts and uncles, you, Douglas Stone Kilpatrick, human being, were thereby enrolled.

It is the custom of grandfathers, on such occasions, to wonder what grandsons will do, and what they will find, in the years ahead. I am not so concerned with material things — with space travel and new communications and miracles of medicine and science. These will come. By 2026, when you are my age, you and Heather may be looking forward, matter of factly, to reaching 97 and 100 respectively. In your late 20s, around the turn of the century, the two of you may be traveling around the world as casually as your mother and father now drive from Williamsburg to Richmond.

I wonder instead about the things that matter. What will you discover about the great families of mankind, the families identified by race and religion and nationality? Will they learn in your lifetime to live at peace with one another? Will you grow up, Douglas, to a world of love and charity and compassion, a world in which human beings do not seek to hurt, or to kill, or to enslave other families?

Your grandfather has read too much history and covered too many wars. Your grandfather gravely doubts that your world, in these respects, will be significantly better than this world has ever been. It is altogether probable that the hatreds, jealousies and passions of mankind will still be around, and you and Heather, dwelling on an increasingly crowded planet, may not be able to do much about it.

But you can try, Douglas. You can try. That is all any of us can do, in any age, in any universe. We can try to live up to the good and godly concepts of the family you have joined. You were born of love. As you grow older you will know hurt and pain and frustration — of course you will — but you will know love also, and you will love many things.

I hope you will come to love this church and this community and these wooded hills, for such a love, as Burke said, is the first link in the series by which we proceed toward a love to our country, and to mankind. You have, my grandson, a long and loving way to go.

Grandfather

Bible stands alone among world's books

"A house divided against itself must fall," said Abraham Lincoln in another time of national travail. That President Lincoln was quoting the Gospels directly goes largely unnoticed.

Salesmen for generations have brought expensive gold-stamped Bibles to the doorsteps of the deceased, collecting exorbitant prices from bereaved widows for books they believe to have been ordered by their late husbands.

And the conservationists have found that the Bible spoke knowingly of the transgressions of man: "I brought you into a plentiful country to eat the fruit and the goodness thereof; but when ye entered, ye defiled my land and made mine heritage an abominations."

The point is that the Bible continues to be a secular, political and ethical guide unlike any other in history. It has been an indispensable part of the educated man for centuries. It has permeated the speech and thought patterns of the English-speaking world until it is used by great leaders and hucksters alike, both to good effect.

Millions of Americans grew up in hardscrabble homes which contained only one book—the Bible. Millions more of the young spent many a Sabbath morning in competitions to see which could turn most quickly to particular Bible verses.

The literary power of the Psalms has shaped and molded the thought processes of the English-speaking world for hundreds of years. It is impossible to imagine a world from which the Bible's ethical values were removed.

Johann Gutenberg, the inventor of printing in Europe, devoted much of his life to putting the Bible into a printed book. Along with other German burgers of his time, he understood from the first that this would be the most fantastic reading material of all time.

So have printers down through the ages understood the universal appeal of the Bible. It can be purchased between cedar covers on the Way of the Cross in Jerusalem, in a hippie version rewritten on a South Georgia collective farm, or in many other versions at any bookseller's.

But it is not for its commercial values or its many latter-day forms that the Bible is held dear to both those who have faith in its veracity and those who hold it to contain literary power despite their lack of faith.

The quality which binds the world to the Bible is its sudden flashes of revealed truth and its philosophical insights: "Thy word is a lamp unto my feet, and a light unto my path."

National Bible Week, which began Sunday, is an appropriate time to recall that this is a pathfinder for those who wonder how the nation and the world can return to high ethical values. (Atlanta Constitution)

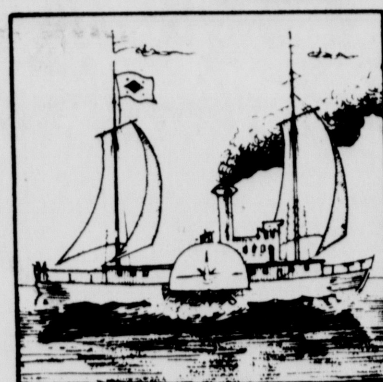

Island grows

Ellis Island, the abandoned immigration center in New York harbor, originally measured 3½ acres. Nine-tenths of its present 27½ acres is ballast dumped by ships from all over the world.

Thin skinned

The chromium on automobiles and household appliances is only a few millionths of an inch thick. A brilliantly polished layer of chromium must be thin or the fragile metal will flake.

WORLD ALMANAC FACTS

The Phoenix became the world's first ocean-going steamboat when it steamed from New York to Philadelphia in June 1809. The World Almanac recalls. The trip was made after Robert Livingston, who owned an exclusive right to operate steamboats in New York, refused to allow John Stevens' ship to ply the Hudson River. The voyage revealed that the Phoenix's construction was more seaworthy than that of Fulton's steamboat, the Clermont.

"Now is the Time for All Good Men to Come to the Aid of Their Party!"

By JACK ANDERSON

WASHINGTON — To save critical fuels, President Nixon has called upon his fellow Americans to turn down their thermostats. "That means in this room, too," he said solemnly.

He also cut back the allocations of jet fuel for aircraft and asked governors to reduce highway speeds to 50 miles per hour. Afterwards, he showed up late for a dinner honoring his wife Pat and cracked: "I'm sorry I'm late. I could drive only 50 miles an hour."

The truth is that the President and his aides haven't been practicing the austerity they have been preaching. He drafted his public appeal in balmy Key Biscayne, Fla., where the warm sun kept the temperatures comfortable. His luxury jet burned 8,000 gallons of fuel to make the round trip.

The following weekend, he helicoptered to his Camp David retreat, which is only about an hour from the White House at 50 miles per hour. The round trip took an estimated 140 gallons of fuel.

He has made one concession to the fuel pinch, according to our White House sources. His Irish Setter, King Timahoe, who is a difficult helicopter passenger, used to follow the President to Camp David in solitary splendor in the back seat of a chauffeur-driven limousine. Now the dog must share his limousine with low-ranking White House aides.

For a man who has devoted a lifetime to striving to reach the White House, Richard Nixon spends less time there than any past president. But a spokesman told us the President has no plans to curtail his travel.

The men around the President have also displayed little spirit of sacrifice. Energy czar John Love, who wants his fellow citizens to drive slower and drive less, is whisked around Washington in a Chrysler New Yorker from the White House motor pool. His chauffeur picks him up at his home in the mornings and deposits him at his doorstep at night.

Interior Secretary Rogers C. B. Morton declared on national television that "energy has been too cheap" in the United States. Gasoline is $1.35 a gallon in Italy, he remarked, in an obvious hint that American motorists should be paying more for their gas.

The taxpayers, of course, pay for Morton's gasoline. As a concession, he has given up his White House Chrysler and now gets around in a government-owned Plymouth — chauffeur-driven, of course.

When he flies, the six-foot-seven-inch Morton goes first class, courtesy of the taxpayers — because he is too big, he complains, "to fit into a coach seat." He also makes use of Interior Department airplanes, but only, said a spokesman, "when his schedule is screwed up."

The Pentagon has also made a big show of reducing temperatures and cutting back fuel consumption. But this hasn't cramped the lifestyle of the military brass. The Pentagon still operates its sleek fleet of chauffeur-driven cars to ferry around the brass and their bigwig friends.

The demand for VIP limousine service is so great, in fact, that the Pentagon is forced to rent cars to supplement its motor pool.

Nor has the military curtailed its personalized worldwide flight service for junketing congressmen and other assorted VIPs. Three days after the President's TV appeal to save fuel, the Army ferried a planeload of congressmen and military officers to West Point for the Army-Miami University football game.

Throughout the government, indeed, the bureaucrats are burning more gas than ever. Government automobiles burned 34 million more gallons of gasoline in 1973 than in 1972. And despite the oil squeeze, the projected increase for 1974 is an additional 30 million-gallon increase.

Down the line, the bureaucrats apparently take their example from the President who has his own fleet of five jetliners, 15 helicopters, 11 Jetstars, 23 limousines and a yacht.

Technically, the aircraft are owned by the military which has asked Congress for money to buy 17 new choppers to replace those now in use. Two more jumbo communications planes are also being outfitted and the White House is shopping for four more medium-range jets.

Merry-go-round

White House not energy-conscious

When the President isn't using his personal air force, the planes are routinely taken aloft for test flights so they will also be in top condition when he calls. Usually, a back-up plane and a press plane accompany the President on all major flights, carrying everything from the hot line phone to the First Lady's hairdresser.

These Boeing 707 jetliners each consume about 2,000 gallons of fuel per hour. A round-trip to San Clemente, in other words, uses up 20,000 gallons. If all three presidential planes make the flight, as they normally do, the fuel consumption adds up to a staggering 60,000 gallons every time the President decides to spend a few days at San Clemente.

Meanwhile, Nixon has lowered the temperature at the White House where his staff works while he is at San Clemente or Key Biscayne.

Today's thoughts

Teach me, O Lord, the way of thy statutes; and I will keep it to the end. Give me understanding, that I may keep thy law and observe it with my whole heart. — Psalm 119:33,34.

To live in the presence of great truths and eternal laws, to be led by permanent ideals — that is what keeps a man patient when the world ignores him, and calm and unspoiled when the world praises him. — Honore de Balzac, French novelist.

What's the beef?

Less than half a steer on the hoof ends up as "take home" beef. A 1,000-pound animal dresses out to a 600-pound carcass, which trims down to 162 pounds of fat, bone and waste, leaving 438 pounds of salable beef.

Get the drift

The average iceberg that drifts far south as Newfoundland and the Atlantic shipping lanes has a volume of 5,000,000 cubic feet and weighs 150,000 tons, compared with 50,000,000 cubic feet and 1,500,000 tons when it was glacier-born three years earlier.

Rusty screws irk gal in moon era

By POLLY CRAMER
Polly's problem

DEAR POLLY — Is there any way to separate photo negatives that have stuck together from either heat or long storage? — JENNY.

DEAR POLLY — It amazes me that name brand small appliances of assumed quality are put together with screws that rust. My particular Pet Peeve is with a well-known make mixer that has beaters rusting where they are put together at the bottom and a blender on which the blade fittings are badly rusted. Certainly a country that can put men on the moon could make a screw that does not rust. — MARLENE.

DEAR POLLY — If Virginia wants to cover her bathroom walls with old magazine covers she should buy a can of wallpaper paste and apply as directed. After the paper is up and thoroughly dry, apply a thin coat of clear varnish. — Good luck! — SANDI.

DEAR POLLY — and Virginia who wants to wallpaper her bathroom with magazine covers — I wallpapered my boys' bedroom with the stock market section of the newspaper and used regular powered-type wallpaper paste. After the papered walls were dry I painted over them with a polyurethane varnish. I used two coats of this for washability. My only problem was handling the paper. It becomes very wet when the paste soaks through. I used a sharp razor blade to trim along the baseboard and ceiling lines. Let 24 hours elapse between the actual papering and the first application of varnish. The finished product was well worth the effort involved. Anyone who has hung any paper at all should have no trouble. — LUCILLE.

DEAR GIRLS — The magazine covers will be far easier to "hang" than were the newspaper pages but I do think Lucille had a very unique idea. When using such flimsy paper I think it might be easier to follow my method for applying fabric to a wall. I spread the paste evenly over the wall space (one width at a time) and then smooth the fabric on to the paste. By starting at the center of a width and brushing, with a clean dry wallpaper brush, to the outer edges, all the air bubbles are pressed out. — POLLY.

DEAR POLLY — I regularly misplaced my meat skewers. Then I started keeping them in an old toothbrush container. This holder is transparent plastic so I can see through it and it takes up scarcely any drawer space. It could be used to hold many such small, easily misplaced kitchen gadgets. — MRS. H.S.

Weekend accidents claim 17 in Missouri

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Weekend traffic accidents in Missouri resulted in 17 deaths. Two of the mishaps killed six persons.

Three members of a Star-ville, Miss., family died in a two-car crash during Sunday's predawn hours on U.S. 66 near Willow Springs in the southern part of the state. They were Keith L. Hall, 39; his wife, Mildred C. Hall, 44; and their 8-year-old son, Tom.

Hours later in extreme south-east Missouri, three out-of-state people were killed in a car-truck collision. The victims were Mack Field, 30, Chicago, and two passengers in his car, Albert Yarbrough, 47, Milwaukee, and Stephen Westbrook, 4, Marianna, Ark.

Other weekend victims: Saturday—Albert Klag, 76, St. Louis, struck by a car in St. Louis while crossing a street; Leslie Sidney Blankenship, 20, Kansas City, a one-car accident on Interstate 35 south of Cameron; Vivian Sue Jackson, 28, Davisville, a one-car mishap near her hometown; Lester A. Dehn, 54, Windsor, struck by a car on Missouri 52 on Clinton's east edge; Paul T. Whipple, 42, Sugar Creek, driver of a cement truck that collided with a freight train east of Springfield.

Friday night—Jerry Hilderbrand, 21, two-car crash on Missouri 87 on the southeast side of Booneville; Bernard Ray Robinson, 20, Perryville, passenger in a car involved in a police chase that ran off a Perry County road; Tommy L. Jackson, 18, Advance, one-car accident on Missouri 51 near Arab; Louise Gaches, 14, Galena, in a fiery one-car crash near Highlandville in Southwest Missouri; Gilbert Juarez Jr., 24, a two-car collision in Kansas City; Phil Warren Thompson, 52, Grandview, Mo., one-car accident east of Fulton.

Woman dies in fire

KANSAS CITY (AP) — A woman died early today in a fire at her home. Authorities said the victim was Helen Kloster, who was about 48. Cause of the fire has not been determined.

Four youths found shot in park area

SIoux FALLS, S.D. (AP) — Four teen-age youths have been found shot to death in a park near here. Authorities sealed off the area and said they would not comment on any motive in the slayings.

Preliminary police reports indicated the boys, between the ages of 14 and 17, were from South Dakota. But their names and hometowns were not made available.

Police sealed off the Gitche Manitou Park in extreme northwestern Iowa about 10 miles from here after the bodies of the four youths were found Sunday.

Authorities said they found two of the bodies at what they believed to be the scene of the slayings. The other two had been dragged a short distance away, police said.

Octane ratings vary according to source

WASHINGTON (AP) — Following directions in the owners' manuals can cost car owners $1 or more a tank at the gasoline pump.

The reason is the new octane ratings posted on gasoline pumps at the order of the Cost of Living Council.

The owners' manuals for at least the early models of 1974 American cars universally recommend a gasoline of 91 "research-octane" or better.

The white circular stickers on gas pumps generally offer a choice between gasolines with octanes of 87 or 90 or 95. What the owner of any American car built since 1972 wants is 87.

Octane measures the antiknock properties of a gasoline. Using a gasoline with too low an octane can damage the car's engine. Using a gasoline with 400 high an octane is a waste of money.

But all octanes are not alike. Any owner's manual printed prior to this year couches its recommendation in terms of research octane, which is based on antiknock properties under mild operating conditions.

Another type of octane — motor octane — measures the antiknock properties under more severe conditions.

When the government first proposed requiring octane posting, the oil companies complained that the traditional measure, research octane, wasn't a fair measure. The companies didn't much like motor octane alone, either.

So the government compromised. It took the research octane rating, added the motor rating, divided the sum by two and ordered the number pasted on gasoline pumps.

Generally, the posted octane ratings are 87 for unleaded regulars, 90 for leaded regulars and 95 for premiums. The ratings can vary from brand to brand, however.

One reason the Cost of Living Council ordered the octane posted was to detect any hidden price increases achieved by lowering octane ratings.

Sen. Thomas J. McIntyre, D-N.H., had accused the oil companies of cutting octane by 3 to 5 per cent before the posting was ordered.

Now that the octane has been posted, "we've heard from a number of people who are confused," said one of McIntyre's staffers.

The senator has introduced a bill requiring oil companies to include the new octane ratings in their advertisements and requiring auto makers to post the recommended octane in a conspicuous place in each car.

The major automakers are printing new editions of their owners' manuals or writing letters to 1974 owners.

Physicist says more 'UFO' data is needed

ST. LOUIS (AP) — More data will be needed before any explanation can be given for the sightings of strange objects in the skies over southeast Missouri, according to a university physics professor.

Dr. Harvey D. Rutledge, chairman of the physics department at Southeast Missouri State University at Cape Girardeau, presented the results of a study he made of the sightings to the Missouri section of the American Association of Physics Teachers meeting here Saturday.

"I don't want to refer to them as UFO's or flying saucers. They were unusual lights. I don't want to speculate beyond that without additional data," Rutledge said.

He and a volunteer group of physics students and astronomers conducted field observations for 78 nights in and near the cities of Piedmont, Farmington, Fredericktown, Cape Girardeau and Sikeston.

During 38 of the observations, which covered the period from April 6 to Nov. 10, "unusual lights" were observed and photographed, Rutledge told the group of interested physicists.

The lights, colored orange and green, darted at varying speeds and sometimes moved rapidly across the sky. At other times they blinked on and off, said Rutledge, who has been at SEMO State since 1963.

He presented about 20 slides, most of them time exposures of six to 10 seconds, showing streaks of light in the darkened sky. One photograph showed a wiggly streak, which when enlarged, revealed "coil-like spirals originating from the streak."

The photo was similar, Rutledge said, to the effect of "charged particles in a magnetic field."

He said nothing "solid" could be found in the sky by radar on the nights the lights were observed. He added that on two occasions he saw lights being followed by jet aircraft.

During a question and answer period, one physicist asked Rutledge if he thought the lights could have been caused by microwaves similar to those which transmit television pictures over long distances.

Rutledge acknowledged the possibility, but said scientific instruments were not available during his study to investigate that angle.

He said he hoped for additional funding to proceed with further studies using more sophisticated equipment.

Rutledge began his investigation after a high school basketball coach and five of his players reported watching wide-eyed an unidentified flying ob-

Blank Buffalo, 17-0

Miami Dolphins clinch AFC Eastern Division

By HAL BOCK
Associated Press Sports Writer

Mercury Morris smiled when somebody mentioned the fact that Miami's defending Super Bowl champions had clinched a National Football League playoff berth.

"What did you expect?" asked Morris. "That's what we're supposed to do."

Winning has become a way of life for the Dolphins. They are 9-1 this season following Sunday's methodical 17-0 victory over Buffalo, their second straight shutout. Over two seasons, their log reads 26-1.

Morris, who gained 79 yards against the Bills, looked at his 1973 championship ring. "This is what we're after again," he said. "Today was just phase one to getting another one of these."

There are other teams with Super Bowl ambitions too and Sunday was a good day for some of them but not so good for others. Washington maintained its piece of first place in the National Conference East, defeating stubborn Baltimore 22-14 while Dallas was pounding Philadelphia 31-10.

Kansas City took over first place in the American Conference West, ripping Houston 38-14 while Cleveland was knocking off Oakland 7-3 and dropping the Raiders into third place. Denver edged into second place just one-half game back, stunning Pittsburgh's AFC Central leaders 23-13.

Los Angeles protected its lead in the NFC West, beating San Francisco 31-13 to open a 1½-game margin over Atlanta which hosts unbeaten Minnesota tonight.

Elsewhere, New England slugged Green Bay 33-24, the New York Giants overtook St. Louis 24-13, Cincinnati topped the New York Jets 20-14, Detroit thumped Chicago 30-7 and San Diego took New Orleans 17-14.

Buffalo ran up some impressive individual statistics against Miami with O.J. Simpson rushing for 120 yards and Jim Braxton getting 119. But they pay off on points and the Bills went nowhere in that department against the Dolphins' defense.

Simpson shrugged off the yardage that pushed his 10-game total to 1,323... 540 yards short of Jim Brown's all-time pro record with four games to go. "This was another game," said Simpson. "and what was important was that we lost it."

Jim Turner kicked three field goals, the last one a 42-yard tiebreaker that ticked the crossbar on the way over, to defeat the Steelers and take over second place in the AFC West, just one-half game back of Kansas City.

Harold Jackson caught four passes for 117 yards from John Hadl and three of them went for touchdowns, leading Los Angeles past San Francisco. Brodie found Jackson on TD passes that covered 25, 22 and 57 yards for the victory.

Washington's Curt Knight kicked five field goals to beat Baltimore. Knight's boots were from 35, 18, 37, 42 and 29 yards and he hardly resembled the place kicker who had slumped so badly early this year.

Dallas fell behind 10-0 against Philadelphia before roaring back to defeat the Eagles. Walt Garrison scored two TDs and set up another for the Cowboys, who broke Philadelphia down once quarterback Roman Gabriel was forced out of the game with a bruised elbow.

Joe Namath, out since the second week of the season, dramatically came off the bench and marched New York to Cincinnati's goal line before running out of time as the Bengals hung on to beat the Jets.

Namath didn't quite see it that way, saying that Rich Caster had twice caught passes in the end zone that should have won the game. "I thought we had it won twice," said Namath. "It was poor officiating. Caster was in both times."

Two field goals by Horst Muhlmann, the second from 51 yards, won it for the Bengals.

The New York Giants ended a seven-game losing streak, defeating St. Louis on a pair of fourth-quarter TDs. Ron Johnson scored twice for the Giants. Jim Plunkett passed for 348 yards, leading New England past Green Bay. Plunkett threw two TD passes and ran for another while Jeff White kicked four field goals.

Detroit intercepted four Chicago passes and Larry Walton caught two TD passes, helping the Lions defeat the Bears. Dick Jauron returned one of the interceptions 95 yards for a TD.

Ron Smith returned a punt 84 yards for a San Diego TD and the Chargers defeated New Orleans for their first victory under new Coach Ron Waller. Bob Howard's interception set up San Diego's other score.

Move into division lead

Livingston gives Chiefs new life

KANSAS CITY (AP) — Fabulous football quarterback Len Dawson may have started his last game for the Kansas City Chiefs.

Coach Hank Stram didn't shut the door completely on Dawson's chances of returning to the starting lineup. However, when somebody asked him Sunday if Mike Livingston was the No. 1 quarterback until he proved otherwise, Stram answered:

"No question about it."

Dawson, 38 and a 17-year pro, has been sidelined seven straight games with a heel injury. Since Livingston took over, the Chiefs, after floundering around in three outings prior to that, have won them all, including Sunday's 38-14 decision over the Houston Oilers.

"Mike hit some shots right on target against Houston," said Stram, "and pinpointed his passes extremely well."

Livingston passed five yards to rookie Gary Butler for one touchdown and 24 yards to Otis Taylor for another. He ran three yards for a touchdown himself after he went back to pass and couldn't find a receiver. Livingston completed 13 of 19 passes for 149 yards.

The victory gave the Chiefs, 6-3-1, undisputed possession of first place in the American Football Conference West Division, one game ahead of the Oakland Raiders, who lost to Cleveland 10-3. Denver is sandwiched between the two clubs.

"We are playing well," Stram said. "We made some mistakes but we are getting better each game. It's important to beat teams like this. We didn't last year."

The mistakes which particularly caught Stram's eye allowed Houston to score both its touchdowns after the Chiefs had taken a 24-0 lead.

Leroy Keyes fumbled and Brian McConnell recovered at the Houston 23. Lynn Dickey, despite heavy pressure, passed to Bog Gresham, who snared it at the Chiefs' 40, broke away from tacklers and ran to the goal.

Livingston's pass was intercepted by Guy Roberts shortly thereafter and returned four yards to the Chiefs' 42. Fred Willis went over from the one seven plays later.

"You're darn right I was scared then," Stram admitted.

The Kansas City defense came to the rescue. Willie Lanier, a linebacker, intercepting a Dickey pass and returning it 29 yards to set up a touchdown at the one and defensive end John Lohmeyer grabbing a Dickey fumble and running 19 yards for six points.

"They're the same Chiefs they've been for years," said Oiler Coach Sid Gilman. "... big and talented. Dickey moved us a little better than Dan Pastorini. They're both good quarterbacks. They just need a little help. They'll have it one of these days."

Vikings risk undefeated record against Falcons

ATLANTA (AP) — The Minnesota Vikings, who already have clinched a division title, will be fighting to protect a 9-0 record in a televised game tonight with the Atlanta Falcons, whose rangy, strong-armed quarterback will be gunning to protect his own perfect record.

Falcon field general Bob Lee — a former backup quarterback in the Vikings camp — is undefeated since he took over the starting quarterback role for Atlanta from veteran Dick Shiner.

Lee has led the Falcons, now 6-3, to a five-game winning streak. Atlanta now trails the Los Angeles Rams by one game in the National Football Conference West Division title race. Minnesota has secured the NFC Central Division title.

"The game is naturally more important to Atlanta, which must keep winning if it is to get in the playoffs," said Viking Coach Bud Grant. "But on the other hand, we are 9-0 and we must recognize what the Atlanta game represents to us... you learn more things when you win."

The American Broadcasting Company will televise the game beginning at 9 p.m. EST. Lee spent last season on the bench watching the Vikings' Fran Tarkenton lead Minnesota to a 7-7, third-place record.

"Sure, we practiced against Lee and we know a lot about him," said Viking safety Paul Krause. "But at the same time he knows what he can do and what he'd better not do."

Grant commented, "He knows what his old coach is thinking, so these things counteract each other."

The game will also match two of pro football's hottest defenses.

Minnesota leads the National Football League in defense, allowing only 94 points in nine games. Atlanta is second in defense in the NFC but No. 1 against the pass, yielding an average of only 95 yards per game.

Despite an early three-game losing skid in which they scored only 15 points, the Falcons have scored a total of 240 points, with Lee connecting on 79 of 132 passes for 1,081 yards, six touchdowns and four interceptions.

Tarkenton has completed 112 of 185 passes for 1,456 yards and 10 touchdowns, and has not thrown an interception in his last 90 attempts. The Falcons will play without wide receiver Ken Burrow, who has 31 receptions for 567 yards and seven touchdowns.

Goodyear opens season with win

COLE CAMP — The Goodyear independent basketball team of Sedalia opened its season here Sunday night with a 98-68 win.

Four Goodyear players reached double figures, led by Ernie Dow and Jim Houchen, who gunned in 28 and 20 respectively. Tom Beer added 18, while Jerry Stamps also reached double figures with 14.

Roger Donnell topped Cole Camp with 18, while Don Luetjen and Larry Newbill added 14 and 10 respectively.

Allen forces fumble

Although it may look like Houston's Eddie Hinton (87) is about to catch a pass, he isn't. He's just caught up the ball on the two-yard line. Nate Allen (48) forced Hinton to fumble the ball, when he hit him around the ankles. Kansas City's Buck Buchanan runs to the aid of Allen. Emmitt Thomas made the recovery for the Chiefs, who went on to win, 38-14. (UPI)

Heart attack claims life of golfer Lloyd Mangrum

APPLE VALLEY, Calif. (AP) — Lloyd Mangrum, one of golf's elite of the 1940s and 1950s and winner of the U.S. Open, is dead at the age of 59.

The sharp-tongued, quick-witted Mangrum, was stricken by a heart attack and died at his home in this high desert community on Saturday. He had lived here since the early 1950s. When he retired, a writer dubbed him "The Squire of Apple Valley," a title Mangrum disliked but wore with humor.

No funeral services were planned. The body will be cremated. A family spokesman said a farewell gathering will be held at the Apple Valley Country Club Tuesday evening.

Mangrum, a native of Texas, came to California with his family as a child and began playing pro golf in the 1930s.

He was second in the 1940 Masters to Jimmy Demaret and by 1941 was ranked with golf greats Ben Hogan, Sam Snead and Byron Nelson as one of the top men of the sport.

Mangrum won the U.S. Open in 1946, shortly after his discharge from the Army, by taking a 36-hole playoff from Nelson and Vic Ghezzi.

In 1950 he lost the Open title to Hogan, again in a playoff. Mangrum was a four-time winner of the Los Angeles Open and two-time champ of the Western Open. Bing Crosby Pro-Am, Greensboro Open, Tucson Open and Phoenix Open.

Survivors include his widow Eleta, a son, two daughters, eight grandchildren and five great-grandchildren.

State Fair bid for title thwarted by Roughriders

By VAUGHN HART
Sports Editor

Bill Barton isn't greedy; he just didn't want to come out of the State Fair Classic with a split.

"We've got a tough road trip ahead and we wanted to take a 3-0 record with us," said Barton after his Roughriders went flat in the late minutes of regulation and went on to lose Saturday night's championship game to Crowder College of Neosho, Mo., 70-64, in overtime.

State Fair hits the road for five games, including two four-team tournaments, following Tuesday night's contest in the Agriculture Building with Robert Morris College of Carthage, Ill.

SFCC handled Jefferson College easily in Friday night's opening-round game, 76-43, to gain entry into the finals against the Roughriders, who edged Trenton Junior College, 53-52, in Friday's other first-round contest.

The Crowder victory, which pushed the Roughriders' season mark to 3-0, in some ways took the tarnish off their finish in their own classic last season, when State Fair claimed the title with a win over highly-touted Gulf Coast Community College of Panama City, Fla. in the finals.

Trailing by seven with just under 10 minutes to go, Robert Dillard, a 6-2 forward from North Bardock, Pa., geared the come-back effort for Crowder. Dillard put the Roughriders ahead 53-51, with 5:20 showing in regulation.

With 2:54 left in the game, Dillard completed a three-point play that forced State Fair to come from behind, 58-57.

Sophomore forward Mark Franklin knotted the game at 60-60 with 2:16 left. Charles Shell put the Roadrunners ahead, 60-58.

Both teams had chances to score before the clock ran out, but neither could, sending the contest into overtime.

Dillard again took charge in the overtime, finding the range at 4:24 and 3:16 to put the Roughriders in the lead, 64-60. After State Fair shot and missed, Crowder took the rebound and went into a stall.

Freshman guard Jerry Bybee fouled Tyler Laney, who converted both free throws at 1:21, putting Crowder in front, 66-60.

Bybee finally broke the ice for State Fair at 1:02, but Steven Gillens countered with a bucket at :28, which again put the Roughriders ahead six, 68-62.

Bob Smith pulled the Roadrunners within four with 15 seconds showing, 68-64, but Jesse James kept State Fair at bay with a field goal with just :05 showing to insure the victory.

Crowder could have salted the game away early, when two of Barton's key starters inside, Stan McNeill (6-9) and Colles Webb (6-4), were forced to the bench with three fouls each, with less than six minutes gone in the opening half.

Shell, who tallied 19 points for runner-up game honors, along with four guards, kept the Roadrunners in the game for the balance of the first half.

"That was the only time in the ball game when I thought we were really hungry," said

Barton. "Shell did a good job on the boards during that time, while Easley and Smith gave us the offense over the top."

Crowder went cold from the field and saw a six-point lead dwindle, behind the outside shooting of Smith and Easley. Easley tied the game at 16-16 with 8:27 to go. He also put them ahead with another field goal 17 seconds later.

By the end of the half, State Fair held a three-point edge, 26-23.

State Fair got it going again midway through the second half, building a 47-40 lead with 9:54 showing.

Less than two minutes later, however, the Roughriders were within two. Geary Scott pulled Crowder even, 49-49, with 6:53 remaining.

From then on the score saw-sawed.

Crowder stayed in their 1-2-2 zone virtually all the way. State Fair started man-to-man, but had to switch to a zone in the second half, with McNeill and Webb playing with three fouls each.

Following an Easley bucket at 4:58 of the second half that tied the game, 53-53, Barton went back to man-to-man.

"It's just a shame that we had to play so poorly in the second half... I don't know what it is... we are young in some areas, but our young players didn't hurt us nearly as much as our experience inside... overall we didn't play well enough to win," Barton said.

And with that, his thoughts turned to Robert Morris, a team the Roadrunners lost to last year in the only meeting ever between the two clubs.

Fulton woman takes lead in state keg tournament

JOPLIN, Mo. (AP) — Melba Elley of Fulton leads the Class A singles of the Missouri Women's Bowling Association tournament. Betty Harke of Troy is atop the Class B singles and Paula Woolery of Kansas City, Class C.

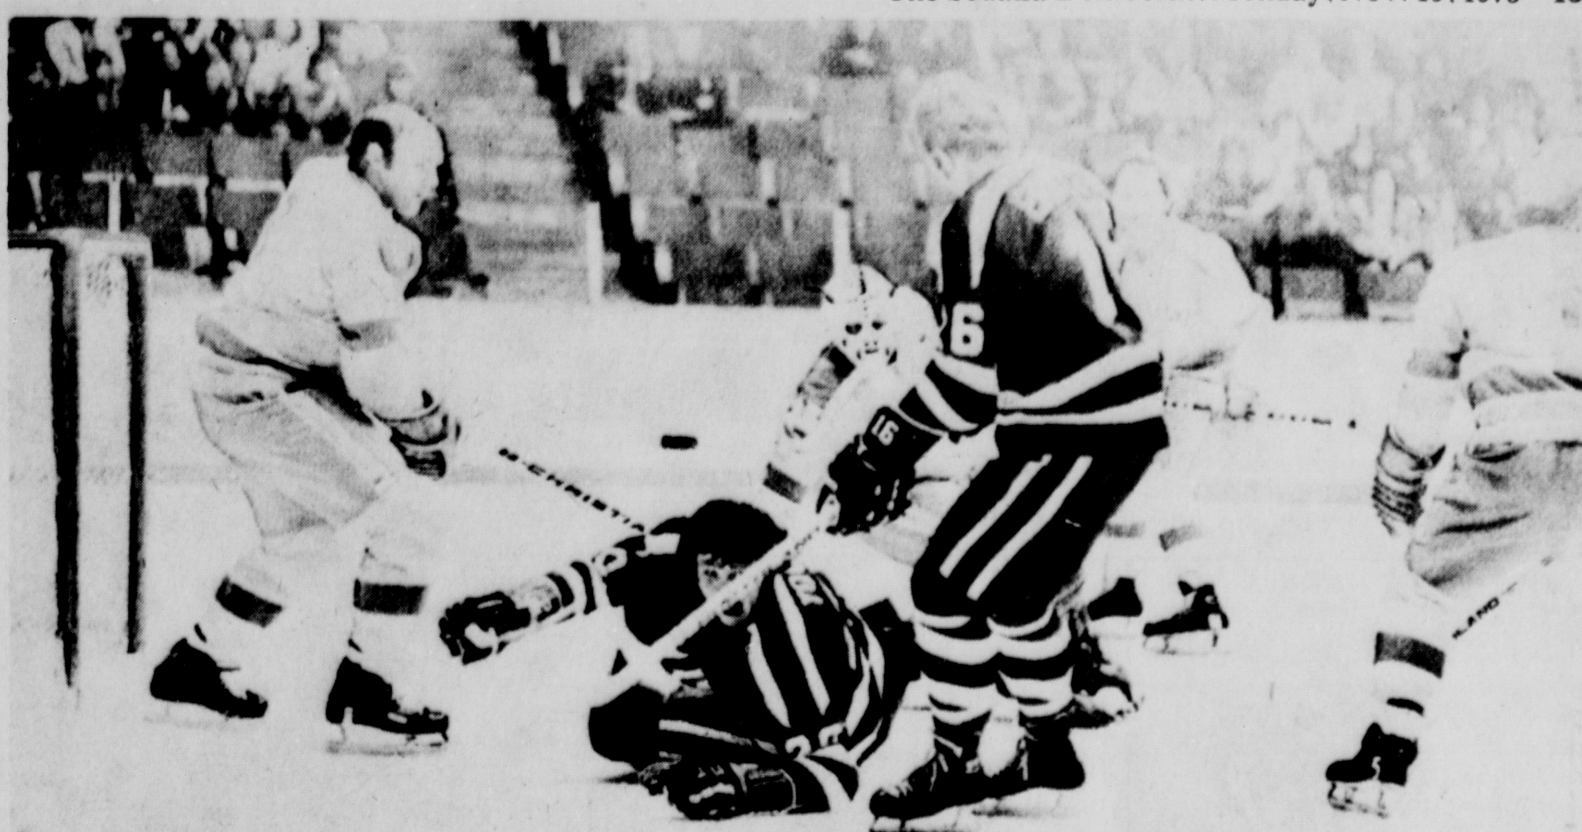

Competition continues through the weekend of Dec. 15-16.

Mrs. Harke's advance to the lead of Class B was the only major change in the standings of the weekend. She rolled a 720, including handicap, that gives her a 21-pin advantage over Diane Whitley of Jefferson City.

The team leaders are unchanged. George Mayer Realty of St. Louis leads Class A with 3,061; L&L Fashions of Farmington, Class B with 3,005 and Foster's Foundation of Orono, Class C with 2,998.

Doubles leaders are Jan Dewen and Earline Jones of Joplin, Class A with 1,262; Marj Raines and Shirley Harden of Nevada, Class B with 1,328 and Rowena Cox and Sharon Lulsey of Blue Springs, Class C with 1,301.

Sooners, NU clash Friday

KANSAS CITY (AP) — You don't need a program to find out who's playing Friday ... Oklahoma vs. Nebraska.

The annual BIG game of football season comes off in Norman, Okla. The third-ranked Sooners, 5-0 in the league, can win it all by bumping off Nebraska, 4-1-1. Even a tie would turn the trick. Should the 10th-ranked Cornhuskers stop Oklahoma, they will have to wait until the Sooners' Dec. 1 date with Oklahoma State to see who's the champion.

Other games, all Saturday, send Oklahoma State to Iowa State, Kansas State to Colorado and Missouri to Kansas.

Three Big Eight teams accepted postseason bowl invitations after last Saturday's action which saw Oklahoma smother Kansas 48-20, Nebraska crush Kansas State 50-21, Iowa State upset Missouri 17-7 and Oklahoma State outscore Colorado 38-24.

Kansas, 18th-ranked and 3-2-1 in the conference, goes to the Liberty Bowl at Memphis, Tenn., Dec. 17 to play North Carolina State, Missouri, 14th ranked and 3-3, faces Auburn in the Sun Bowl at El Paso, Tex., in a night game Dec. 29. Nebraska draws Texas in the Cotton Bowl Jan. 1.

The Sooners can't play in a bowl contest because of probation stemming from recruiting violations.

"I knew all year we'd come down to this — the Nebraska-Oklahoma game," Sooner Coach Barry Switzer said today. "Nebraska and Oklahoma have the best players in the country but, thank goodness, they don't have Johnny Rodgers any more."

"It will be a real tough defensive struggle, and one touchdown or one point will be the difference. There won't be much scoring. Field position in the kicking game will be of utmost importance."

"Call it the big shootout," Tom Osborne, the Nebraska coach, said the Huskers "can't make the mistakes we made against Kansas State and expect to beat Oklahoma. We can't make any mistakes."

Coach Vince Gibson of Kansas State, whose team has been thrashed by both the Sooners and the Huskers, said Oklahoma is the best team he has seen.

"The Sooners can do everything," Gibson explained. "Nebraska isn't as quick and doesn't have the offense that Oklahoma has."

"This is a fine Nebraska team. They are well coached but they don't have a Johnny Rodgers and they can't match those national championship teams."

The Sooners almost ran the Jayhawks off the field with 27 points in the first quarter even though Dave Jaynes, the league passing leader, hit on 21 of 43 passes for 248 yards and one touchdown. Joe Washington and Steve Davis each scored twice for the Sooners.

"I think that's the best Oklahoma club I've seen — ever," said Kansas Coach Don Fambrough.

Tony Davis made three TDs for Nebraska against the Wildcats, 1-5. Isaac Jackson scored two for the Cats.

"We ain't got enough physical strength to compete with them," Gibson said.

Iowa State, 1-5, used Buddy Hardeman's nine-yard pass to Keith Kreple and Phil Danowsky's three-yard run for another touchdown to beat the Tigers.

Tiger Coach Al Onofrio attributed the defeat to "our errors, four fumbles and one interception."

Thirty-one straight points by Oklahoma State, 2-1-2, were too much for Colorado, 2-4. Brent Blackman threw touchdown passes to Reuben Gant and Eddie Garrett and scored one himself. Steve Haggerty chipped in with two for Colorado, one on an 85-yard punt return.

Southeast St. assured of tie

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
Southeast Missouri State got all the help it needed from quarterback Lance Brune and from Southwestern Saturday to wrap up the Missouri Intercollegiate Athletic Association football championship.

Southeast, with Brune passing for four touchdowns, rocked Central Missouri, 27-0, to finish with a 5-1 MIAA record. That assured the Indians of at least a tie for the title, since Lincoln was 3-1 in the league with two more games to play beginning the day.

But Southwest, which only one week earlier had shocked defending MIAA champ Northwest, ended the race by running down Lincoln, 17-0. It was only the third victory in 10 starts for the Bears, but their 3-3 conference mark assures them of no worse than fourth in the standings.

In the only other MIAA action Saturday, Northeast and Rolla settled for a 7-7 tie when a 37-yard Northeast field goal attempt sailed awry with 10 seconds left.

Rolla now is 1-3-1 going into a Thanksgiving Day trip to Jefferson City, when Lincoln puts a 3-2 MIAA mark on the line. Northwest is now alone in second place at 2-4-1, while Northeast finishes 2-3-1 and Central last at 1-5.

In independent action Saturday, Missouri Southern saw its fall from last year's perfect campaign completed with a 16-14 loss to Arkansas Tech. That gave the Lions a losing 4-6 mark for the season to go with 1972's 11-0 reading.

Washington University climbed to 5-2-1 by battering Washington and Lee, 21-8, and Missouri Western added some glitter to a 4-5-1 windup by upsetting Doane College, 20-16, at Crete, Neb.

Brune hit 24 of 34 attempts for Southeast, good for 271 yards.

After a scoreless first half, the Indians turned two turnovers into touchdowns in a two-minute span at the outset of the third quarter. Brune's TD strikes of 32 and 13 yards to Rich Attia in the fourth period wrapped it up.

Tom Okker wins

LONDON — Tom Okker downed Ilie Nastase of Romania, 6-3, 6-4 and won the men's first prize of $7,200 in the Dewar Cup tournament, while Virginia Wade of Britain topped American Julie Heldman 6-2, 3-6, and 7-5 to take the women's singles title in an international tennis tournament.

Oswald: "The man who wears both suspenders and a belt also carried a few safety pins in his pockets, is not likely to ever have his pants fall down."

Jim: "It sounds as if you are getting ready for us to show some safety plays."

Oswald: "Why not? Here is a very simple one to start. The careless declarer lays down dummy's ace of clubs at trick two. East shows out and our careless player complains about his bad luck."

Jim: "The careful declarer comes to his hand with a spade at trick two and leads a low club. If West holds a singleton king South makes all the tricks. As it is, West plays the five and now South makes the safety play by covering with the six of clubs from dummy.

Oswald: "This guards against all three clubs in the West hand. If East held all three, West would show out then South would go up with dummy's ace and lead back toward his queen."

Jim: "The bidding is worthy of note. With a minimum notrump and nearly all his strength in three-card suits, South rebids three notrump, whereupon North gives up all thought of the grand slam and just bids six."

FUNNY BUSINESS

'Retired' Sinatra makes TV comeback

By JAY SHARBUTT
AP Television Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — The last song Frank Sinatra sang in public before he "retired" in mid-1971 was "Angel Eyes." The last words of the tune are, "scuse me, while I ... disappear."

He sang them softly, sadly, and then disappeared from show business. But Sunday night he came roaring out of retirement in a one-hour NBC special that bears repeating and soon for the unfortunates who missed it.

The chairman of the board is indeed back, and so is the superb phrasing, the taste, the sensitivity that have made him a favorite of not only the public but most musicians today.

Before canonization proceedings begin, it must be said there were a few spots — on ballads — where Sinatra's voice seemed slightly rough. And he was noticeably flat, an uncommon occurrence for him, on the top note of "Here's That Rainy Day."

These nits we've picked were buried by the sheer fun of watching the 55-year-old singer get back to work, backed by a fine, swinging band and good arrangements by Gordon Jenkins and Don Costa.

Sinatra, whose show was taped at Paramount Studios before a black-tie audience of friends, seemed exuberantly happy to be back at what he called "the same old stand." And, after noting that his retirement "seemed like a good idea at the time," he promptly retired, kicking off with a collection of his old hits, tunes like "I've Got You Under My Skin," "Street of Dreams" and "I Get a Kick Out of You."

His voice was sharp, crackling with excitement on the up-tempo material and surprisingly strong for a guy who allegedly hadn't been singing much since the night he called it a day.

A wonderful touch on an already-excellent show was the guest appearance of Gene Kelly, who swapped quips with Sinatra about those old MGM musicals they once sang and danced in.

They eased into a special material bit about their hoofing days the theme was "We Can't Do That. Anymore." — and proceeded to prove otherwise with some great soft-shoe routines that belied the passage of nearly 30 years since their MGM labors.

If this is what age has done to them, particularly Kelly, I'll have a drink right now of whatever they've been drinking.

Nixon undertakes credibility campaign

WASHINGTON (AP) — All week long he said it, again and again.

"As far as the President of the United States is concerned, he has not violated his trust and he is not going to violate it. I was elected to do a job."

Richard M. Nixon was on a credibility campaign.

"I am going ... to the best of my ability to restore confidence in the White House and in the President himself."

He said it, in those words and differently, in a speech to 3,000 cheering realtors in Washington. He repeated it in breakfast and luncheon sessions with congressmen and senators, and again at a nationally televised question-and-answer session with newspaper editors.

"People have got to know whether or not their president is a crook," he said. "Well, I'm not a crook. I've earned everything I've got."

The White House had said the President was going on a counter-attack to restore support eroded in months of Watergate and related controversies. And he did.

Eight times during the week he met with congressmen and senators, in groups as small as six and large as 78. He made three public appearances in four days and makes a fourth on Tuesday.

At a Saturday night news conference with members of The Associated Press Managing Editors Association, the President repeated his explanation of various Watergate-related matters.

He explained again the case of the nonexistent White House tapes and gave his version of key conversations about Watergate. He discussed his income taxes, the Ellsberg break-in and his relationship with fired Watergate special prosecutor Archibald Cox.

"I have never obstructed justice," Nixon told the editors.

He said, "If mistakes were made (in the 1972 campaign) I'm not blaming the people down below. The man at the top's got to take the heat for all of it."

During the hour-long news conference at Orlando, Fla., the President fielded every question and said, "I welcome this type of examination." He even extended the televised news conference into overtime to discuss the milk fund controversy.

Nixon's offensive also took other forms.

On Monday, the President announced he would turn over additional personal notes, dictation belts and tape recordings to U.S. District Court Judge John J. Sirica to clear up "once and for all" what happened in two crucial Watergate conversations.

Later in the week, Sirica rejected the offer saying the court didn't want to become a depository for subpoenaed material. But the President proffered them again in his Orlando news conference.

A presidential trip to Georgia on Sunday had all the trappings of a campaign appearance: 15,000 at the airport, petitions of support, signs of "Hang In There," a motorcade along streets lined by thousands.

Fatal shooting of 3-year-old ruled accident

LEBANON, Mo. (AP) — The fatal shooting of a 3-year-old boy six miles north of here has been ruled an accident by Sheriff Francis Murphy of LaCade County, who acted in his capacity as deputy coroner.

The victim, Lee Roy Coleman, was visiting with his father at a mobile home on county Route BB Sunday. Thomas H. Coleman, 62, the father, was outside with other adults when the shooting occurred, Murphy said.

Murphy quoted Glen Perryman, 12, as saying he was putting away a high-powered rifle when Lee Roy called for his attention. The weapon discharged when Glen turned to see the younger boy, who was struck in the face, the sheriff said.

Lee Roy and his father lived on the same rural route in the same vicinity, Murphy said.

Farm roundup

Analysis shows farmers got two-thirds of food increase

By DON KENDALL
AP Farm Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — A new analysis shows that consumers are spending about $134 billion on U.S. farm-produced food this year, up $18 billion from 1972, and that higher prices paid farmers accounted for about two-thirds of the jump.

The analysis was included today in a report issued by the Agriculture Department on where food dollars wind up.

Despite the jump in "farm value" of food, middlemen continue to take the biggest bite for transportation, processing and selling charges. Those add up to $83 billion this year, the report said, an increase of eight per cent from 1972.

"The farm value of U.S. farm food products may total $51 billion this year, up about 30 per cent from 1972," the department said in a Marketing and Transportation Situation report. "This would be the largest annual increase in the past 25 years," the report said.

The $134 billion estimated on farm-food spending this year does not include imported or seafood products. When those are added, a spokesman said, the total U.S. food bill this year is expected to be $139.8 billion. Last year food expenditures totaled $125 billion for all categories.

WASHINGTON (AP) — An Agriculture Department expert said today that the huge Soviet Union grain crop this year could result in larger export sales but that Moscow probably will pay attention first to rebuilding depleted reserves.

Fletcher R. Pope, writing in the weekly "Foreign Agriculture" report by USDA, said the Soviet crop—estimated at a record 215 million metric tons—will "significantly relieve" the Russian grain crunch.

"Although feed use and exports will probably benefit from improved supplies, rebuilding of grain stocks is expected to be given high priority," Pope said.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The

Agriculture Department says U.S. butter supplies in 1973-74 may be down eight per cent from last season as milk output continues to lag and more is diverted to cheese making.

Milk production this year has declined three per cent from 1972 and is expected to decline further in 1974, according to USDA experts. Butter stocks, consequently, are expected to be smaller.

The Nixon administration recently opened the door to more butter imports in an effort to replenish the supply.

Many scientists believe that tektites — small blobs of black or green glassy material — splashed to earth about a million years ago when a huge meteorite struck the moon, forming the crater Tycho.

History buff is trying to clear Benedict Arnold

WASHINGTON (AP) — After poring over time-yellowed records, an Army board has ruled solemnly that there isn't enough evidence to clear Gen. Benedict Arnold of Revolutionary War misconduct charges.

But Vincent A. Lindner, a Scotch Plains, N.J., history buff who reopened the 193-year-old case, says "public opinion is now in Arnold's corner" and he's going to appeal to Congress.

The Army's Board For Correction of Military Records did not look into treason accusations that have blackened Arnold's name throughout history.

What it did examine was Lindner's claim that Arnold should not have been convicted by a 1780 court-martial on two charges of misconduct, including "using public wagons to transport private property."

Lindner contends Arnold was a victim of "character assassination" by political enemies, that the prosecution never proved Arnold profited by his actions, and that the general was subjected to double jeopardy because a congressional committee previously had exonerated Arnold of the same charges.

Recently, about five months after agreeing to consider Lindner's formal appeal, the Army board notified him that "insufficient evidence has been presented to indicate probable material error or injustice" and that his application was denied.

Raymond J. Williams, the board's executive secretary, told a reporter "we tried to give the guy (Arnold) a fair shake. We spent a lot of time on the case."

Williams said, "We had extreme difficulty in locating the records of General Arnold's court martial."

"The records were hard to decipher," Williams said. "It was terrible."

Lindner had no complaint against Army board officials, calling them "fair minded men working within the framework of ... military law."

But he said in a letter to The Associated Press that "I have no intention of abandoning my appeal."

Many people who have read or heard of his appeal have been writing to him, Lindner said, and the mail is running at better than nine to one in favor of Arnold.

Lindner plans to encourage historical societies and pro-Arnold people to write their congressmen.

"A congressional committee in 1779 did find Arnold innocent of these charges," Lindner said. "That pronouncement has never been altered. It is to this body, Congress today — an extension of the 1779 body — that we will appeal to."

Lots of friends

More than 200 fellow employees of Sylvain Mahler, 51, Fremont, Calif., have offered to donate their sick leave to him because he has none left and is running out of money. Mahler, pictured at his home, is unable to return to work as a groundskeeper because radiation treatments for cancer have weakened him. Officials of the park district say they are not sure they can accept the donations of more than 1,000 hours sick leave but will make a recommendation after receiving an employee petition. (UPI)
